Fatal Collision Cancels Dayliner

Today's scheduled run of the E & N Railway's dayliners was cancelled following a fatal collision Wednesday afternoon involving the train and a car driven by a Duncan man.

Frances Kelin, 75, of Herd Road in Duncan, was killed when his car collided with the dayliner three miles north of Duncan.

Klein was alone in the vehicle. No injuries were reported by the train's crew or 12 passengers.

E & N spokesmen said it has not been determined how long the dayliner run will be out after today.

An inquest has been ordered into Klein's death.

$20,500 FOR MUSEUM

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley Forest Museum has been granted $20,500 through Canada Manpower's local initiative program to construct a repair and restoration shop.

The municipalities of Duncan, North Cowichan and the village of Lake Cowichan are supplying the building materials while the grant pays the wages of seven persons to erect the building. Lumber for the project is being supplied by area mills and construction companies.

Museum manager Pat Phillips said that with the restoration shop they will now be able to give the irreplacable and historically significant exhibits the work and attention they need.

"During the summer we are busy catering to people and during the winter we need a shop for repairs. Now we will have it," he said.

Free Press Threat

Times News Services

The province's withholding of advertising from Victoria's two daily papers "must be the most serious threat to the freedom of the press that this province has ever experienced," the president of the B.C. Weekly Newspapers Association said Wednesday.

Stan Stodola, who is also publisher of the Osoyoos Times in the Okanagan, said in a telegram to Premier Bennett the ad-ban decision was "an unprecedented form of economic reprisal which does not belong in a freedom loving country." The government announced last week it would no longer advertise in the two papers after they ran tobacco ads.

Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate said today the newspaper will not follow the example of the two Victoria newspapers in flouting the provincial government's ban on tobacco advertising.

"We are going to abide by the law which, incidentally, we think is crazy and ludicrous," he said.

"But the proper place to fight it is in the courts, where it is going forward now."

Keate added the Sun has "a lot of sympathy" for the Victoria Times and Colonist, following the provincial government's announcement last week that the papers will receive no more government advertising because they ran a cigarette ad.

"Our feeling is that in due course the law will be changed, if not by this government," he said.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, a lawyer told B.C. Supreme Court Justice E. E. Hinkson that the Social Credit government is trying to "dictate by prohibition" through legislation banning advertisements of liquor and tobacco in the province.

The lawyer, Doug Brown, was continuing an argument on behalf of four tobacco companies and three publishing firms in the second day of a test case challenging the validity of the Tobacco Advertis-

Ottawa Curbs Methadone, 'Speed' Use

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is clamping tighter controls on methadone, frequently used as a heroin substitute, and amphetamine drugs which are commonly called "speed."

Health Minister John Munro announced in the Commons today that new regulations will be enforced whereby the drugs can be prescribed only with his permission.

Following recommendations made by the LeDain commission on the non-medical use of drugs,. Munro said physicians receiving permission to prescribe methadone must be associated with a specialized clinic.

The regulatory changes can be made in a few weeks, he said, and the program should be fully operational by June 1.

"In the meantime, I call on the physicians of Canada to utilize retraint in the use of methadone."

The minister said his department has received many reports concerning the misuse and abuse of methadone.

The LeDain commission, in suggesting that use of the drug be restricted to specialized treatment clinics, described the drug as "the most promising of all available approaches to the opiate narcotic dependence problem." Mr. Munro said several months ago there was a growing methadone-abuse problem among non-heroin addicts.

SEES OVER-PRESCRIBING

Mr. Munro said that while smaller amounts of amphetamine now are being prescribed, "considerable evidence has come to the attention of my department indicating the overprescribing of these drugs by some medical practitioners."

There also was evidence that the related drug phenmetrazine and phendimetrazine are misused in a similar manner.

As a result, he said, these drugs will be limited to the treeatment of legitimate medical disorders—in this case, the relatively obscure diseases of narcolepsy and hyperkinesis.

Doctors no longer will be allowed to prescribe them for the treatment of obesity in the form of "diet pills."

A list of consulting physicians will be drawn up to verify the two diseases.

Mr. Munro said restrictions on the use of amphetamines will not prevent "speed freaks" from getting drugs through illicit sources.

"Nevertheless, this action does indicate the serious light in which the government views amphetamine abuse and should have marked effects on an important aspect of abuse of these drugs—that by adults who obtain their drugs on prescription."

He expected this program to be operational by Sept. 1.

'DEAR JACK... RE THAT PROFIT'

"Dear Jack.

"Congratulations! I have just heard about the very healthy financial report you presented to your shareholders. I would remind you, however before you allocate these profits that by June 15 we expect to strike a bargain on the fair distribution of this bonanza among the workers in your company."

B.C.'s Most Wanted Criminal Arrested

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said today that Raymond Joseph Palmer, sought for questioning on the mailing of a bomb which blew off both hands of a British Columbia prison guard, has been arrested in Sydney, Australia.

Palmer, who escaped from the British Columbia Penitentiary in 1970, was arrested today in a dawn raid on a suburban Sydney home. Police sharpshooters surrounded the house and a squad armed with pistols and shotguns burst inside to find Palmer cooking breakfast for a young woman and two children living there.

He threw up his hands and backed against the kitchen wall. Police seized a large quantity of ammunition and two revolvers. Palmer was held on charges of being an illegal immigrant and is being questioned about three holdups there.

A Vancouver RCMP officer is expected to arrive in Australia soon to apply for an extradition order.

Proceedings were under way to have Palmer charged as an habitual criminal when he escaped from the penitentiary in 1970 while serving a six-year sentence for narcotics possession.

RCMP also want to question him about the slaying of a police informant as well as the bomb incident on Christmas Eve, 1966.

Guard Frank Nowton had returned from work to find several Christmas packages waiting at his home in North Surrey. He took them into the kitchen and began opening them as his son, Norman, then 10, watched.

The bomb was concealed in

GIRL FOUND UNCONSCIOUS ON MALAHAT

A teen-aged girl was found unconscious and seriously injured in a ditch beside the Shawnigan Lake cutoff a mile from the Malahat late Wednesday night.

RCMP said the girl, estimated to be about 14, is in critical condition at Cowichan District Hospital. She was found at 11.15 p.m.

The girl carried no identification and police have been unable to determine her identity. Shawnigan Lake detachment is investigating possible assault or hit-run.

Passports Don't All Come Easy

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. William Dennison, wife of Toronto's mayor, said Wednesday she "just sat down and wept" when she was refused a new passport last week until she could provide proof of Canadian citizenship.

She said in an interview her mother had brought her from England "as a babe in arms" in 1910 and she had lived in Canada ever since. Four previous passport applications had been granted "with no trouble at all."

But she ran into stiffened government procedures when she applied for a renewal. The government passport office said she'd have to provide proof of citizenship.

She had to produce a wedding certificate — the Dennisons have been married 33 years—and birth certificate. They were sent to Ottawa and then a new citizenship certificate had to be notarized by the city clerk.

"I had to laugh about it at first," said Mayor Dennison who leaves Sunday with his wife on a 10-day trip to Israel. "But she was pretty angry and I agree with her."

The mayor said it "seems ridiculous that a person who has lived her life in Canada—since she was four months old—and held passports for years should suddenly be told she's not a citizen just like she was a newcomer."

Peking Talks Explore Links

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai held a three-hour secret summit session today, exploring ways of opening future channels of friendship between the United States and China.

They then spent two more hours together at a friendly, informal dinner.

Over-all, the two leaders were in each other's company for five hours without interruption but strict secrecy continued to prevail on their discussions.

Their lengthy meeting came a few hours after Nixon declared at the centuries-old Great Wall of China that he hopes his China visit would help break down walls of any kind — diplomatic as well as physical — that "divide the peoples of the world."

Nixon and Chou began their latest talk at 5:15 p.m. Peking time and were closeted together until 8:15 p.m. They then joined their wives, advisers and other guests for the two-hour dinner in another room of the mammoth Great Hall of the Peoples in central Peking.

Since Nixon's arrival in China four days ago, the two world leaders have been together approximately 25 hours, more than half of that time devoted to official discussions.

Newsmen were given no inkling of information on the progress of the latest Nixon-Chou get-together, but an air of cordiality seemed to be still prevailing.

It was definitely learned that the thorny issue of Taiwan, where the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek holds forth, was a principal topic of discussion by Nixon and Chou.

Meanwhile, in London, an unofficial Soviet publication launched a sharp personal attack on Nixon and voiced strong official suspicion of the Sino-American talks in one of the first broad comments on what it termed The Peking Opera.

NEW ARCTIC OIL FIND

CALGARY (CP) — Panarctic Oils Ltd. announced today the discovery of crude oil on Ellesmere Island in the Arctic. The discovery is the first in the northern islands. The company said further drilling and testing is needed to determine its commercial potential.

President Charles Hetherington said if the find proves substantial, its location in the eastern part of the islands means production could be shipped to eastern markets many months of the year.

Loffmark's Conflict

City Man Knifed, Dead; Suspect Goes to Police

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

A 21-year-old man was stabbed to death in front of a hotel doorway early today while police officers were in the hotel parking lot investigating another matter.

Russell Streeter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin G. Streeter, 520 Ridley, Colwood, was pronounced dead at Queen Victoria General Hospital at 2.10 a.m., less than half an hour after the stabbing.

Police are questioning a 20-year-old man who turned himself in at city headquarters this morning.

Constables Frederick Wilfred Mills and Arthur Robert Blackie were in the parking lot on the south side of the Colony Motor Inn at Douglas and Hillside at 1:38 a.m.

The officers were interviewing witnesses in their cruiser after an unidentified man threw a beer bottle through the windshield of a patron's car.

At 1:45 a.m., Streeter stumbled to the side of the police car and collapsed to the pavement, with two stab wounds in the stomach and one in the chest.

The victim was rushed to hospital, where he was pronounced dead shortly after arrival.

There were 30 to 40 persons in the parking lot when the stabbing occurred. Blood stains indicate the slaying took place about 10 feet from an outside door which leads to the hotel beer parlor and coffee shop.

At 9:30 a.m., police said, the suspect walked up to the information desk at Fisgard Street police headquarters. The suspect said nothing, but a man with him introduced the suspect and told the desk officer, "I think you're looking for this man."

The suspect and a number of witnesses were being questioned this afternoon by detectives. A charge was expected to be laid later today.

The police cruiser was parked about 50 feet from the apparent scene of the slaying.

A hotel spokesman said there had been no fights or other incidents in the beer parlor before closing time at 1:30 a.m.

Police said, however, there were reports of an argument involving Streeter, the suspect and another man outside the hotel.

SHE WANTS WINGS

BELGRADE (UPI) — A 22-year-old Yugoslav air hostess who survived a 31,000-foot fall from an exploding aircraft nearly one month ago now reads, smokes, drinks coffee and wants to fly again, a Belgrade newspaper said today.

Vesna Vulovic, the sole survivor of the Yugoslav Airlines plane that crashed over Czechoslovakia Jan. 26 killing 22 passengers and five crew members, is recovering in a Prague hospital from brain, spine, kidney, liver, leg and other injuries.

'Safety Violated'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for striking marine radio inspectors said Wednesday his union believes vessels on the West Coast are violating federal radio safely inspection laws.

Dave McLeod, a spokesman for the electronics division of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, estimated that the radio safety certificates of at least a dozen ships have expired since the union went on strike Feb. 6.

Ed Peck, president of the Towboat Industrial Relations Association, said Wednesday he had no knowledge of any towboats operating with invalid certificates.

Meanwhile poor weather in Eastern Canada and a strike of the 2,200 airport technicians combined today to disrupt commercial air travel across the country.

All scheduled morning flights to the Maritimes out of Montreal were cancelled because of a storm expected to drop three to six inches of snow in the east.

'Go and Get Him Yelled General'

Times News Services

COLERAINE, Northern Ireland — Two newsmen said Wednesday that a British army general urged paratroopers to attack demonstrators during the "bloody Sunday" shooting in Londonderry which left 13 persons dead.

One newsman also said a soldier fired two shots at him.

THIRD DAY

Brian Cashinella of The Times of London and Simon Winchester of The Guardian testified Wednesday, the third day of the one-man inquiry into the Jan. 30 shootings being conducted by Lord Widgery, Britain's lord chief of justice.

Cashinella said Maj. Gen. Robert Ford, army commander in Northern Ireland, yelled "Go on the paras — go and get him!"

Paratrooper squads leaped a barricade and began chasing civil rights marchers, he said.

Cashinella said he understood the command meant for the men to arrest the demonstrators.

IN BOGSIDE

He said he was walking with a crowd inside Londonderry's Roman Catholic Bogside district when "three or four army vehicles, coming fast, came down into the area and the crowd started running."

Winchester said soldiers ran behind the vehicles.

He said he heard six shots.

"People were very frightened indeed, because the vehicles were coming very fast," he said. "There was chaos, confusion, hysteria and screaming."

HALL BURNED

Meanwhile masked raiders today burned the town hall in Strabane, near Londonderry, birthplace of John Dunlap, the man who printed the U.S. declaration of independence.

A gang of attackers, some carrying weapons and some masked, held town hall workers at gunpoint while they splashed the building with gasoline, then set it on fire with bombs. There were no casualties.

In Belfast, troops found an arms cache in the garden of a Roman Catholic convent and a soldier was hit by a guerrilla sniper. Army headquarters said he was badly wounded.

Jeers Greet Geoffroy Explanation

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The opposition shouted with laughter today when Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer told the Commons the only question in the minds of prison authorities in the Yves Geoffroy case was whether he should be given leave of 50 or 72 hours.

Goyer said they decided on 50 hours for the convicted wife murderer.

Geoffroy married Carmen Parent outside the prison walls Christmas Eve and then vanished on a forged passport.

Goyer's new statement in the Commons on the case led to a renewed demand by the Conservatives for a judicial inquiry and by the NDP for the tabling of all pertinent documents.

The Liberals did not join in the laughter and many looked embarrassed.

Goyer said 14 persons were involved in the decision to allow Geoffroy out of prison to be married after serving 14 months of a life sentence for strangling his wife and setting the body afire.

Goyer said the decision by these 14 was unanimous.

The "only" question, he added, was whether Geoffroy should be given 50 or 72 hours outside the prison to be married to the woman with whom he had lived for nine months while his wife was still alive.

David Lewis, NDP leader, said the three documents tabled so far by Goyer — on orders of Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux — show that everyone involved assumed the marriage would take place within the prison, St. Vincent de Paul.

Goyer said there are other documents in the case, such as the recorded decisions of prison authorities.

Lewis demanded that all the documents be made public and Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) renewed a demand for a full judicial inquiry.

Lewis said Geoffroy's request last June 28 to get married did not refer to any marriage outside the prison.

Goyer said Geoffroy's request to be married outside the prison was made to a penitentiary official, though the minister did not say whether the request was made in writing.

The minister said he might create a precedent if he ta-

M-B's $8M Gain Seen as 'Partial Recovery'

By AB KENT
Business Editor

An $8 million improvement in net earnings of MacMillan Bloedel last year falls $15 million short of an ideal situation, chairman J. V. Clyne said today.

The head of the largest integrated forestry complex was asked to comment on 1971 earnings of $25.5 million ($.22 a common share) and his statement that this represented a "partial profit recovery."

Clyne said he considered an additional $15 million in earnings would be closer to full recovery, citing 1969 performance of the company.

That year, MacMillan Bloedel had earnings of $44.55 millioon ($2.04 a share).

Was 1969 not an exceptional year, he was asked.

REALISTIC

"No that should be a normal year," he said, barring labor disputes or a downturn in the economy.

He said having regard for the company's capital investment and return on sales, the area of $44 million net income is realistic.

In 1970 earnings amounted to $17.4 million (83 cents a share) on sales of $646.1 million. Sales last year totalled $703.7 million.

An improved wood products market and absence of large-scale work stoppages were credited for the improvement by Clyne.

MOVED OUTSIDE

He was asked about the company's expanding interest in foreign operations and whether this related to the ability of the B.C. base of operations to provide satisfactory profit.

"We moved outside to protect our markets," Clyne said, mentioning U.S. and offshore undertakings.

There is no intention of moving the base from B.C., he said, where existing allowable annual cut provides enough return to maintain all operations in perpetuity.

But in the U.S. and foreign spheres there are better tax situations that can be realized in Canada.

They are more competitive than Canada, he said.

"We pay full income tax when we cut down trees (in Canada). They pay capital gains. They write down the value of the forest at the time and depreciate from there. We depreciate progressively," the chairman said.

. . . AD CASE

INFORMATION RIGHT

Brown said he wanted "to keep open the question of freedom of the press" and the right of the public to be informed. This included their right to be informed on commercial matters.

"Newspapers are folding up all over the continent for lack of revenue," he said, adding that this was not part of his legal argument.

" . . . the province does not have an unfettered right to do what it pleases."

Brown said the tobacco products and magazines produced and sold by the seven companies involved in the court action are "articles of commerce" and it is important that these be allowed to pass freely from province to province.

"What is the use of having the right of (interprovincial commerce) without the right of letting people know the article has arrived?" he asked.

He noted that Time Canada Ltd., one of the plaintiffs in the action, is printed in British Columbia for distribution within B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan "and, therefore, passes as an article of commerce."

However, he said, the present legislation prohibits the magazine from being marketed in B.C. unless the publishers make a complete revision by deleting ads that were intended to be distributed through other provinces.

"TRYING TO DICTATE"

Other firms involved in the civil action are Benson and Hedges Canada Ltd.; Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd.; Macdonald Tobacco Marketing Ltd.; Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd.; Maclean-Hunter Ltd., and Southstar Publishers Ltd.

Brown said the move by the government was not an attempt to regulate advertising, but to destroy it. He said if the acts had applied only to articles produced, or magazines published, in the province and excluded national magazines and articles shipped into the province, he doubted they would have been passed in the legislature.

In such a case, he said, newspapers and magazines would have moved out of the province to publish the ads outlawed by publications within the province.

Brown said the government encourages the sale of liquor as much as if its sale were left to private enterprise.

"The vast sales made by the Liquor Control Board are such as to suggest that the object is not really to control the sales but simply to channel them through government-operated stores where the maximum profit can be realized.

LIQUOR ENCOURAGED

"The fact is that the government of British Columbia, in its lavish and inviting emporiums, is encouraging the sale of liquor just as much as if the sale had been left in private hands."

He said LCB sales in 1971 totalled $224 million, of which the government made a profit of almost $65 million.

It was even clearer that the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act had no relation to trade in tobacco because that trade remained completely unregulated. Therefore, he could see no reason to ban its advertising unless it was a way of saying advertising "is bad and is a crime."

During a day-long argument in which he reviewed technical legal precedents, Mr. Brown said the legislation pertaining to liquor advertising "lends itself to the possibility of a discriminating situation" in which the government could promote the sale of certain brands by displaying them more prominently on liquor store shelves.

He referred to testimony Tuesday by an assistant professor of economics at Simon Fraser University who said individuals build certain associations with a product through advertising and distribution of that product.

IMAGE LOST

Without advertising, Brown said, individuals could lose the "brand image" and be influenced only by the "point of sale" — liquor stores.

Mr. Justice Hinkson asked whether Brown was suggesting members of the legislature had an "ulterior motive" in passing the liquor-ad ban.

"It is one possible effect," Brown replied, adding that he didn't intend to indicate this was a motive.

"I think they wanted to be identified with motherhood, myself, in passing both acts."

Brown, referring frequently to "the dominion," said balkanization is against the British North America Act which provides for free interprovincial passage of people, labor and goods, "without which Canada cannot exist."

The steady stream of articles of commerce across provincial boundaries should be "jealously protected" and to prohibit the advertising of those articles was inconsistent with the spirit of the constitution.

A manufacturer "is entitled to keep alive what has been inferred upon him by the dominion and the people of British Columbia have the right to retain the privilege of knowing his product exists," Mr. Brown said.

Brown said if the government prohibited the sale of tobacco and liquor as well as prohibited its advertising, there could be no serious objection to the ad ban.

It would be a case of the legislation outlawing advertising being "ancillary" to a valid and wider government scheme of over-all control. This, he said, would make it legal.

Brown is expected to conclude his argument for the plaintiffs when the case resumes today. Wednesday's session, which had been scheduled to start at 11 a.m., was set back nearly an hour by the late arrival of Mr. Justice Hinkson, delayed by another case in New Westminster.

FOURTH DAY MONTREALERS SLIP, SLIDE

MONTREAL (CP) — Montrealers endured a fourth straight day of snarled, rush-hour traffic, school closures and other disruptions today despite some overnight snow-clearing by city workers who had been on strike since last week.

Plows cleared drifts from most major arteries and widened narrow tracks in others but streets remained slippery because of hard-packed snow and ice, made more treacherous by three inches of new snow overnight.

'Air of Unreality' To Forest Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations for a master contract agreement for the British Columbia coast logging industry opened Wednesday with employers complaining that union demands "lend an air of unreality" to the proceedings.

The International Woodworkers of America has a list of 44 demands, including an across-the-board wage increase of $1 an hour, which regional president Jack Moore has said arise "out of years of frustration for our members."

With statements such as these, the bargaining for a new contract covering 28,000 members of the nine IWA locals on the coast is bound to be lengthy, and tough.

USED MEDIATORS

The last contract negotiations, in 1970, ended with both parties agreeing to a contract based on recommendations made by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of B.C. Supreme Court, called in as mediator.

Despite the hardline positions taken by both sides, there was no talk of impending strike action in the all-important forest industry.

The contract obtained by the coast loggers will set a pattern for IWA members elsewhere in the province. The current coast contract expires June 14 and the contract for 7,000 workers in the southern interior finishes two weeks later. The contract for 3,000 IWA members in the northern interior is due for renewal Aug. 31.

CREW CONTROL

Besides the $1-an-hour general wage boost which forms the main feature of the demands by coast locals, the union wants more control over the work force by getting the power to negotiate crew complements and the speed at which machinery is operated.

The union's concern is the work load placed on its members.

Moore said the union is "deadly serious" about all 44 of its demands, which also include wage category adjustments for loggers, tradesmen and others, vacation improvements, pension and dental plans and recognition of pollution control committees.

The main concern, however, is money. The base rate for coast woodworkers now is $3.72 an hour.

In one of the few flashes of humor from the Liberal side in days of Commons exchanges on the case, Sharp said Canada issues visas for persons coming into the country and that Geoffroy and his wife weren't interested in that direction.

Palmer escaped with Murray Allan Boyd by using a makeshift rope of knotted canvas to scale a 25-foot wall at the B.C. Penitentiary. Three months later, Boyd was shot and killed by police when his pickup truck rammed a police car in Vancouver.

Police then received information that Palmer had left the country and was either in Cuba or Australia. In 1971, he was put on the RCMP list of most wanted criminals.

Angela Davis Freed On $102,500 Bail

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Black militant Angela Davis has been freed on $102,500 bail and is expected to spend her first day in more than 16 months outside jail walls at a secret hideout in Santa Clara County.

The 28-year-old Communist and former philosophy instructor gave a clenched fist salute as she emerged from the county jail here Wednesday night after $2,500 in cash and a $100,000 surety bond were posted.

About 75 supporters—some cheering, some weeping—greeted her in a drizzling rain. She made no statement but called a news conference for later today in San Jose.

Superior Court Judge Richard E. Arnason, who will preside at her trial on murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges starting Monday, set bail.

Miss Davis's lawyers argued that she had been denied bail solely on the grounds that she was charged with offences carrying a possible death sentence. Since the California Supreme Court outlawed the death penalty last Friday, they said, there was no further reason to deny her bail.

Miss Davis is accused of furnishing four guns and helping plot an unsuccessful escape attempt by three San Quentin prisoners at the Marin County Civic Centre in San Rafael on Aug. 7, 1970. A judge, two convicts and an accomplice were killed.

She was arrested in New York Oct. 13, 1970.

The bail order prohibits her from travelling outside the six counties of the San Francisco Bay area without court permission, bans all air travel and requires her to live in Santa Clara County.

YOUNG VIOLINIST SCORES 'TRUE MUSICAL DELIGHT'

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Too many music lovers were absent Wednesday night when violinist Masuko Ushioda made her first appearance on a local concert stage at a McPherson Playhouse recital.

Such artistry as was unfolded on the part of both Miss Ushioda and her piano partner, Gregory Allen, deserved nothing less than a packed house.

And although the 500-odd concertgoers who didn't go on this occasion will have another opportunity to hear Miss Ushioda at the Sunday-Monday Victoria Symphony concerts (where she will play the Mendelssohn E Minor Violin Concerto), they will still have missed one of the true musical delights of the season.

UNAWARE

It seems too few people realize that the artist as recitalist presents an aspect more specialized than the artist as concerto soloist.

In sonata work alone, more is revealed in interpretive depth and the specific details of musicianship.

Ushioda and Allen presented two sonatas — the Beethoven Kreutzer, and the limpid Prokofiev No. 2 and the seldom heard, colorful four-movement C Major Fantasia by Franz Schubert.

Both artists are technically superb, total masters of their respective instruments.

Ushioda possesses a degree of lyricism that supersedes her technical virtuosity. One tends to submerge admiration for fine bowing and fingering fluency in sheer enjoyment of her absolute grace and tenderness in phrasing, and warm, sweet tone production.

A diminutive young woman with a delicate charm, she is assured and authoritative and her whole slight body is as expressive of the music as a reed is of the wind that sways it.

The partly open Steinway created some problems of balance in the Schubert number. There was considerable improvement however when the piano was closed and in the main the partnership was a sympathetic and well co-ordinated one.

Excellent a pianist as Allen is, however, there were moments in the Beethoven when something too much in the nature of a contest seemed to develop between the artists. The fact of the matter is that the pianist was less consistently submissive to the music's mood than the violinist.

Q. CULTURED AND SIMULATED PEARLS ARE THE SAME?

A. False! Cultured pearls are grown inside the oyster much as the rare and very valuable natural pearls. Simulated pearls are completely man-made by dipping glass beads in a fish scale solution. In a fine cultured pearl, the orient and lustre of the nacre coating that nature puts around the nucleus is what makes it so lovely and flattering to the complexion. Stop in and let us show you these differences, and the various qualities of cultured pearls available to you. When you want the best—it pays to see your local AGS jeweler.

Reds Walk Out on Paris Talks

Times News Services

PARIS — The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese delegations walked out of the Paris peace talks today, casting doubt on the future of the negotiations. They said they did so to protest President Nixon's "escalation of the air war."

The Communist move coincided with Nixon's visit to Communist China and dramatized Hanoi's repeated warnings that the Vietnam problem must be settled in Paris alone. Hanoi has been reported suspicious of the Nixon visit from the day it was announced.

It was the first time in the history of the three-year-old talks that either side has walked out of a meeting, although both sides have boycotted several sessions. Today's meeting lasted 14 minutes, the shortest yet, and ended without the Americans or South Vietnamese having time to make their usual statements.

Hanoi's Xuan Thuy and the Viet Cong's Nguyen Van Tien read off protest statements and then offered to meet again next Thursday. U.S. Envoy William J. Porter and Saigon's Pham Dang Lam refused to agree to the meeting next week, reserving their full right to decide when and if the talks will resume.

In Saigon, South Vietnamese authorities refused Wednesday to allow a once-powerful general, who still has strong supporters among the militant Buddhists, to re-enter the country after an exile of five-and-a-half years.

Acting on the orders of President Nguyen Van Thieu, Saigon police sent the general, Nguyen Chanh Thi, back to the United States on the same plane in which he had arrived. Thi never even left the aircraft.

While his friends and followers, including a number of prominent politicians, waited to greet him in the passenger terminal, Saigon's police chief boarded the plane and told Thi he could not get off.

As soon as the other passengers had deplaned, the jumbo jet took off, one hour ahead of schedule. Passengers who had booked tickets to fly out of Saigon were simply left behind.

HOTEL MISSES HEE-HAW

NANAIMO — Someone has "borrowed" a burro from the Hotel Malaspina this week and the hotel wants it back.

Sometime after midnight Monday night, a thief or thieves made off with the hotel's pet Mexican burro, which was being kept in a corral adjoining the hotel.

The burro is a brown female, with floppy ears and a distinctive hee-haw, according to hotel officials.

Assistant manager David Freeland said the burro was specially imported from Mexico "to add authenticity to the opening of our new 'Jinglepot' pub."

As for the burro's fate — and Freeland said the hotel is worried because she is so young and excitable — one can only guess that perhaps some specially-imported Mexican bandidos pulled off the heist in the dark of the night.

Indian Protest Set Friday Noon

A group of Indians are scheduled to demonstrate Friday at noon in front of the Legislative Buildings in connection with a series of protests to be held throughout the province over the death of Fred Quilt, 55, of Williams Lake.

Ron Ignace of Vancouver, co-ordinator of the Committee for Fred Quilt, said the main demonstration will be held there on Saturday when a 1,000 persons are expected to march at 1, a.m. from Victory Square to Vancouver courthouse.

He said the aim of the demonstrations is to get an "open or independent inquiry" into the Quilt incident, and the two RCMP officers involved be charged for his death.

WANTS INFORMATION

A transcript of an inquiry into Quilt's death was tabled in the legislature this week by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who made a plea for more information from anyone more who may have witnessed the incident.

Frank Calder (NDP-Atlin), an Indian MLA, said today the demonstrations will not achieve anything, and advised that the best way to get the case reopened was for more witnesses to step forward.

Christine Quilt had testified in January that RCMP constables Daryl Bakewell and Peter Eakins had brutally beaten her husband when they had approached his truck which was stuck on a road near Williams Lake. Quilt died two days later, on Nov. 30, from a ruptured small bowel.

The constables had testified they had not beaten Quilt when they found that he, his wife and two others were drunk.

Ignace said Camosun College students are orgaizing the demonstration in Victoria. He said protests are also planned for Prince Rupert, Prince George, and the Queen Charlotte Islands.

MINERS ENDANGERED LIVES, SAYS HEATH

LONDON (UPI) — In his first public statement on Britain's seven-week national coal miners' strike, Prime Minister Edward Heath Wednesday charged the miners with endangering the lives of 50 million Britons and pledged to keep the lid on future pay hikes.

Heath, speaking to the Engineering Employers Association said: "One section of the community cannot endanger the whole group."

Miners began balloting Wednesday on a proposed 21 per cent pay boost that would cost the ailing British mining industry about $371.8 million. Results were expected Friday and union leaders who endorsed the proposals predicted it would be accepted.

Heath said the size of the miners' pay boost was "unique" to their industry and warned against other unions trying to seek as much.

Park Chiefs To Meet Monday

The official opening of a week-long conference of superintendents of the Historic Parks of the Western Region of Canada will take place in the Provincial Museum's board room Monday at 1 p.m.

Prior to the opening, delegates will be taken on a tour of Fort Rodd Hill by superintendent Jack Rippengale.

In a ceremony slated for 10:15 a.m. that day a certificate of appreciation will be presented to Charles Hutchinson, 435 Springfield, for the contribution he has made toward the preservation of Canadian history.

The presentation will be made by Ron Malis, regional director of the National and Historic Parks Branch, western region.

TAX TIPS FOR YOU

Q. I know I may not claim tuition fees paid to an educational institution if the fee does not exceed $25. However, last year I took several courses, each with a fee of $10 or less, but the total for the year is more than $25. May I claim these tuition fees when filing my income tax return?

A. Provided they otherwise qualify, these fees would be deductible if they were paid to the same educational institution. It is the total of fees paid to the educational institution that counts.

Q. I gave $50 to the United Appeal. Can I claim this as a tax deduction in addition to the standard deduction of $100?

A. No. You are entitled to claim either the standard deduction of $100 or your charitable donations and medical expenses, but not both in the same year.

Q. On my income tax return, I have always claimed my father as a dependant. Last March he was killed in an auto accident. How much may I claim for him, if anything, in my tax return?

A. If your father's income for the year, up to the date of his death, was less than $950, you may claim any amount you spent for his support during the year of his death, up to $550 maximum.

Q. I have been claiming my children as exemptions on my tax return. Can my wife claim the medical expenses paid on their behalf, on her tax return?

A. Ordinarily, the answer is no. Medical expenses can be allowed only to the person who claims the dependant for the year when the expense was incurred.

Victoria Times

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1972

BRIAN TOBIN, Editor — STUART UNDERHILL, Publisher — GORDON BELL, Managing Editor

A Strange Response

It is now 10 days since the Victoria Times published an advertisement for a named brand of cigarettes. It was the first to appear in a British Columbia daily newspaper since September 1, 1971. That was the date that the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act went into effect. The Times' advertisement, however, was far from being the first of its kind to appear in B.C. during the period in question.

It was to draw attention to the unfair application of the Act that the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist each accepted a tobacco advertisement. They were asking: Why the discrimination? Why can periodicals published outside B.C. — and even some printed here — circulate without one tut-tut from the government although their pages glitter with cigarette advertisements?

Laws are made to be upheld, but they must be upheld by their makers as well as those who live under them. They must be applied fairly. In the case of the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act, press and public are entitled to know with certainty where they stand.

The Attorney-General, confronted with such an unmistakable demand for clarification, surprisingly did not respond through the law courts. Instead, he deprived the Victoria papers of revenue from government advertising, the bill for which is footed by the taxpayers. It is almost as if he were saying to the newspapers: "The Act is there but we don't enforce it. Take your choice. Publish one thing or the other — tobacco advertising or government advertising."

"... not one of my better days ... at times I had difficulty in thinking up insults ..."

To Speed the Parks Program

The provincial government has made a good move in presenting legislation to enable regional districts to borrow funds for the purpose of acquiring parklands.

One of the chief problems, now that the need for adequate public park reserves has been recognized, is to find enough money each year to purchase desirable park sites while they are still available. There is heavy competition from promoters, sub-dividers and other interests who wish to develop choice waterfront and other properties, and land prices rise each year.

A regional district board cannot delay its purchasing program very long and find many excellent locations still available, but without enabling legislation a region has not been able to borrow money for this purpose. The new bill will make this possible, and although Recreation and Conservation Minister Kiernan has mentioned the mainland particularly in supporting the measure, it should serve admirably in the Capital Regional District as well.

There are a number of properties in this area which should be acquired by the Regional District Board as soon as possible. The East Sooke Park project has considerable boundary tidying-up to be done, and the future of Thetis Lake Park is still dubious so long as it is not legally dedicated and also given proper protection along one boundary by acquisition of private property which drains into the lake.

The new legislation should be of help in this regard, as well as in speeding the over-all parklands program of the District Board. Used with proper restraint, the new borrowing power should prove to be a very useful tool.

Surviving in the Best of All Possible Worlds

Sooner or later it was bound to happen. Filmgoers who are familiar with the super computer "Hal" in the movie "2001" will nod knowingly. The Economic Council of Canada has devised a complicated computer program which can be used to forecast the performance of the national economy a decade from now.

The program involves the use of 1,600 inter-related mathematical equations, the end result of which is supposed to be an analysis of such things as price trends and potential markets. The formula will make use of the most recent data.

With uncharacteristic humor, the wizards of the Council have named the complex program "Candide." The story by Voltaire recounts the life of hero Candide who is asked to believe that his mounting ill fortune is in reality the best possible fate. Candide would feel at home in our mixed economy. Officially, though, the term Candide is an improbable acronym of Canadian Disaggregated Inter-Departmental Econometric model.

Politicians from here to St. John's will be wondering if Candide can help them produce provincial and federal budgets, while the average citizen will simply be left wondering, period.

Millions and Billions

OTTAWA — The Juggernaut rolls on. On Wednesday the president of the Treasury Board, Charles M. Drury, brought down the estimates, with the usual soothing commentary from Information Canada. From these documents we are supposed to conclude that federal spending in 1972-73 will be up by $700 millions over the present year. This may appear a large sum but since expenditures for 1971-72 are expected to total $15,048 millions, we may (it is hoped) draw some comfort from a calculation that the increase is under five per cent.

There are other comparisons, less conducive to a sense of well-being, which may occur to interested taxpayers. For example, $700 millions would finance three CBCs with enough over for a pair of departments such as Justice and Consumer and Corporate Affairs. It would have been enough last year to run the Post Office and the Department of Agriculture. Even in these days, it is a great deal of money.

Nevertheless, we could count ourselves fortunate if the government in fact planned to increase its spending by only $700 millions. Mr. Drury offers no such assurance. At this time last year he presented us with main estimates of $14,352.2 millions but the government by the end of April will have spent $15,178.2 millions. In other words we were required to contribute for budgetary purposes $826 millions which did not appear in the February Blue Book.

Euphemism

The "annual expenditure plan" (to borrow a euphemism from Information Canada) anticipates increased outlays of almost $1.4 billion. But while this may be a more proper accounting, it is still somewhat meaningless. Last year, it would have shown an increase of approximately $1.44 billion over 1970-71 but when February unknowns were added to the totals the difference came to almost 1.7 billions.

The economic Council has expressed disappointment with the investment intentions of corporations as they appear from a recent survey. But there is no imminent danger of a slowdown in federal government spending. We appear to have achieved a budgetary growth rate of about 11 per cent per year, which far exceeds real growth in the economy and might be a problem if anyone in Ottawa worried seriously about deficits.

It is arguable that government should sustain the economy when the private sector flags. From a glance at the total estimates table, however, which goes back to 1962-63, it is apparent that the growth of government is quite independent of the economy. In a period of 10 years, budgetary expenditures have increased by slightly more than 141 per cent.

In fact the main estimates leave an impression that the government is not, at the moment, in a particularly ambitious mood.

C. M. DRURY
... offers no assurance

There are not very many spectaculars; not even an estimate for the large additional spending which will result from the promised new family allowance scheme. Instead there is simply growth, spreading in practically all directions like the green bay tree.

Some departments, as would be expected, are expanding more rapidly than others. The biggest increment (more than $250 millions) goes to National Health and Welfare, now exceeded in size only by Finance. But the latter has an unfair advantage, being responsible for the national debt which increases yearly as we move confidently from deficit to deficit. Our anticipated interest bill for 1972-73 is up by $125.7 millions to $2.16 billions, thus further adding to the prestige of the department.

There are other foreseeably large increases, notably $124 millions for Treasury Board, which deals with the civil service, $45.5 millions for Northern Affairs and Indian development, $88 millions for regional economic expansion and upwards of $100 millions for the Department of the Secretary of State who dabbles, directly or indirectly, in almost everything.

Costly Bilingualism

Some modest shoots of the years have grown to notable proportions. Thus our bilingual development in the coming year is expected to cost $90 millions, which is considerably more than was required in 1971-72 for Energy, Mines and Resources. But the government is also carefully cultivating older shoots, including the Post Office, which will cost an additional $41.7 millions in the year now under contemplation.

The additional cost of collecting our reformed taxes will be about $20.9 millions while unreformed Customs and excise will require $10 millions more. Presumably there is no relationship between these increases and an extra $24.6 millions being appropriated for the law enforcement programs of the RCMP.

Information Canada, possibly for good behavior, qualifies for a budgetary increase of almost $2 millions. According to an activities table, information-in and information-out will both be substantially expanded. According to a table of objects, almost everything will be up; salaries, wages, transportation, communications, professional and special services. The bill for "information", however, will be down from $1.3 million to $409,000. Whatever the answer to this mystery, no one will notice a difference.

The CBC will extract an additional $26 millions from Parliament for operating expenditures. This may reflect in part a planned increase in total man-years. Taxpayers may be reasonably confident that good behavior has nothing to do with it.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Film Assessment

This is to inform your readers that a special committee of the Legislature has been established "to review the policy governing the classification of motion-picture films prior to their display within the province and to make the recommendations to the House for any revision thereof deemed to be in the public interest."

It is pointed out that the philosophy of the present legislation is classification, not censorship. The basic classification of movies is carried out by the provincial film classification director so that people are aware of what is being shown and may make up their own minds as to whether or not they wish to attend any particular film.

The last day on which submissions may be received is February 29. Any persons wishing to make written submissions are welcome to do so by writing either the chairman or secretary.—Burt Campbell, MLA, Chairman; Hon. Isabel Dawson, Minister without Portfolio, Secretary, Special Committee on the Classification of Motion-Picture Films, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C.

Evolution

We would take this opportunity to commend Mr. John Tisdalle in his stand against the "Theory of Evolution." It is truly remarkable that in this age of so-called enlightenment, freedom of expression and freedom of choice, that this theory should be taught with such dogmatism.

To believe in evolution as a process requires far more faith than to accept the record of special creation found in the Bible.

The theory of evolution has never been proved: let those who advocate differently bring forth the evidence which must surely be a simple thing to do if it is a proven and scientific fact. Let them bring into plain view the missing link or let them document with evidence man's development from the slime to the upright creature of today.

Let them also solve the problem of the transition from reptile to flying bird or satisfactorily answer the puzzle of the interdependence of one species upon another for their continued propagation.

Until the evolutionists can unquestionably prove their point, let there be equal credence given to the Scriptural record: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." — R. W. Stodel, 1111 Glenora Place.

Charity Show

I was delighted to see your article by Pat Dufour and more than corroborate your sentiments. I was telephoned by an impatient young student who just reeled out the spiel about the circus and said would I take six tickets. I told her that I just didn't do that sort of thing over the phone and asked her to send particulars by mail, when I would consider it.

On getting the write-up I just felt I couldn't support a show involving high-wire performers (without nets) put on for the benefit of handicapped children and senior citizens. So I wrote to the Lions expressing my views on the subject. A few days later I had a phone call from the office of Mr. Bowers and ended up by speaking to him personally.

You are absolutely right about his being a man who talks loud and fast. He is a type we can certainly do without and if that's the way charity is being managed, it's not going to receive my support.

Incidentally Mr. Bowers indicated I was a complete exception and that everyone else was donating, and practically called me a crank or words to that effect. I say bully to you and just hope others feel the way I do.—Mrs. G. Gardner, 7090 Brentwood Drive, Brentwood Bay.

Watershed

One applauds the efforts of the conservationists to save the Nitinat Triangle and the Thetis Lake areas; it would indeed be tragic if these areas fell either to the logger or to the developer.

At the same time one wishes the conservationists would show the same regard for the preservation of the English language that they do for the environment. In describing either of these areas as a "watershed" they do the same sort of violence to our language that they fear the axeman or the developer will do to Nitinat or Thetis.

A watershed or divide is a dividing line (German "scheiden" — to divide or to separate), usually on a ridge, that separates an area in which water flows in one direction from another area in which water flows in the opposite direction. To describe either the Nitinat Triangle or Thetis Lake as a "watershed" either confuses or misleads the reader or implants in him the suspicion that the conservationists do not know what it is that they are trying to save.—J. B. Tatum, 3187 Shelbourne St.

Firearms and Farmers

Regarding the letter by J. G. Ward-Harris, published in the Victoria Times of February 19 under the heading "Saanich Firearms," your readers should be aware that wildlife is protected by the federal government under the Wildlife Act and by the federal government under the Migratory Bird Convention Act — not by municipal ordinances which restrict discharge of firearms for safety reasons.

The fact must not be overlooked that damage caused to crops by protected species of wildlife may amount to hundreds, even thousands, of dollars. The farmer is entitled to protect his crops but is still obliged to apply for a permit to the appropriate Provincial and Federal agencies.

The suggestion that tranquilizer guns could be used to solve the general problem of crop damage by wildlife is unrealistic. Not only is the use of such equipment difficult, time-consuming and costly but it is also accompanied by considerable mortality, through respiratory failure, of the darted animals. Deer transported in any numbers to other "suitable" areas will add to the difficulties of deer already there, by competing for food and shelter — commodities in short supply in the deer world and for want of which many deer die locally, each year, of malnutrition.

One of the reasons that farmers on the Saanich Peninsula are suffering damage from deer and pheasants is that although it is legal to hunt there, under provincial law, the municipal ordinances prohibiting discharge of firearms effectively inhibit hunting in the area, resulting in the build-up of game populations and depredations on crops.

The closure of rural areas in the Saanich Peninsula to discharge of firearms is doubly unfortunate. Not only is the landowner's right to use a gun on his own land stifled — the public is also excluded from a healthy form of outdoor recreation that puts meat on the table, and promotes an interest in wildlife and the need for conservation that benefits hunter and non-hunter alike. — R. P. Finegan, 330 Plaskett Place.

Repent

I wish to express my surprise and concern at the recent action taken by the two local daily newspapers in defying the law by publishing tobacco advertising. I had hoped that the news media would show better judgment than this.

I don't know what your real reasons for this decision are, but I suspect that you are motivated by love of money rather than the constitutionality of a law or public good. I fail to see how any intelligent being can possibly argue that the advertising (or sale) of tobacco and liquor are in the public interest. And while it is true that many members of our society will continue to use these habit-forming drugs whether they are advertised or not, trafficking in such commodities is surely no more to the credit of those involved than if they were peddling (or advertising) drugs which are currently restricted by law.

It is this type of hypocritical money-grubbing which I think justifies some of the contempt which a portion of the younger generation shows for contemporary business and for adult society in general. You are aiding and abetting those who prey on the weaknesses, gullibility and stupidity of various members of our community. (In case you are wondering I am 40 years of age.)

I urge you to desist in what can only be an ill-considered action. I, like you, frequently find myself at odds with the present government of British Columbia, but this is one time that I think they make sense. And I hope that you will be successfully prosecuted if you continue to break the law.

Deliberate law-breaking in any form is a poor example for formulators of public opinion to flaunt before impressionable members of society. And even though other segments of the community have succumbed to the temptation to deliberately break laws which they do not like, it seems to me that law-enforcement officers, teachers and newspapers have a particular responsibility to set an example of law-abiding citizenship which is worthy of emulation.

Surely, in spite of the difficulty of enforcement, the law in question has a good intent and should be supported. In view of the manifest harm done by tobacco, alcohol and other habit-forming drugs, it would be to your credit to campaign against the use of these things and forget the few miserable dollars you acquire by accepting such nefarious advertising.

In my mind the damage you are doing to impressionable minds is twofold: (1) you are encouraging weak-willed people to adopt a habit which will enslave them to the use of a substance which pollutes the air which they and everyone in close proximity to them must breathe, and (2) you are displaying a very poor example of respect for the law.

I should think that there is enough lawlessness and disorder about us now without those who know better creating and encouraging more.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of Feb. 24, 1912

In a House which was singularly inattentive and exceedingly sparing in its applause, Hon. Price Ellison, Conservative minister of finance, this afternoon delivered his second provincial budget speech. The document was a lengthy one and occupied considerably over two hours in its reading.

There was nothing novel in the speech beyond an announcement that a royal commission will be appointed shortly to investigate the conditions of agriculture and irrigation and of all that pertains to the welfare of agriculture generally.

Mr. Bennett Has a Point

The GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau appears to have decided to fight the coming election on the basis of vilification of leaders of opposition parties, particularly provincial premiers.

Last September he accused New Democratic Party Premier Edward Schreyer of Manitoba, in the matter of a date for a federal-provincial conference on unemployment, of "several outrageous statements" and "a lack of candidness," although Mr. Schreyer's letter, on which the accusations were based, did not bear them out.

This month speaking to the annual meeting of the Liberal Party of Ontario, he identified the federal Conservatives, in their opposition to the government's massive increase of parliamentary secretaries, with the Ontario Conservative government.

Distract Voters

"I understand," he said, "it's not unheard of at Queen's Park that the Conservative backbenchers sit on boards and in commissions. And something like two-thirds of them are paid by the Government — the Crown — in order to get a little extra to do other jobs . . . Yet the same people criticize us."

Mr. Trudeau's top insult, however, was reserved for Social Credit Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia whom he described as "the bigot who runs the Government there."

The Prime Minister may wish to distract the electorate's attention from the questions that really concern it. Those long lines of the unemployed. The peculiar nature of Ottawa's trade negotiations with the United States, which have left Canada the only nation without an agreed package to help avert an international economic crisis of frightening proportions.

Yet Mr. Trudeau may have chosen distractions that are as dangerous as the more visible issues. It is disgusting, in the first place, that he should have descended to the level he did in insulting Mr. Bennett — who, like Premier William Davis and Premier Schreyer, was elected to office by the people and cannot be insulted without those people also being insulted. But British Columbia, through Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, has retaliated, and the grounds of the retaliation are not without validity.

Pay Individuals

Mr. Peterson has announced that British Columbia will attack before the courts the constitutionality of equalization payments to have-not provinces. Mr. Bennett has always opposed equalization payments to governments; he has, equally, always urged equalization payments to individuals.

He was proposing a guaranteed annual income long before it was presented by Welfare Minister John Munro in his white paper as "a major anti-poverty policy" (which he did not adopt), long before it was given the blessing of the Senate Committee on Poverty. It is not bigoted to put individuals ahead of governments.

Premier Bennett has often said and done things of which we disapproved; but the present stance of his government has a certain credibility.

Mr. Peterson denounced equalization payments as violating the British North America Act, which requires that all provinces be treated equally; the courts will determine if they do. But Mr. Peterson also attacked the abuse by governments of such grants, citing as an example that the present Quebec government "keeps a palace in France."

Well, it is possible to remember that the people of Quebec did indeed object to the lavish way in which their governments courted France while so many of them were poor and jobless.

The British Columbia government's prescription for helping slow-growth regions — as opposed to equalization payments drawn from the richer provinces — urged three measures: a guaranteed annual income; elimination of boundaries between the Maritime and the Prairie provinces to create five economic regions in Canada; and the introduction over a 10-year period of free trade with the United States.

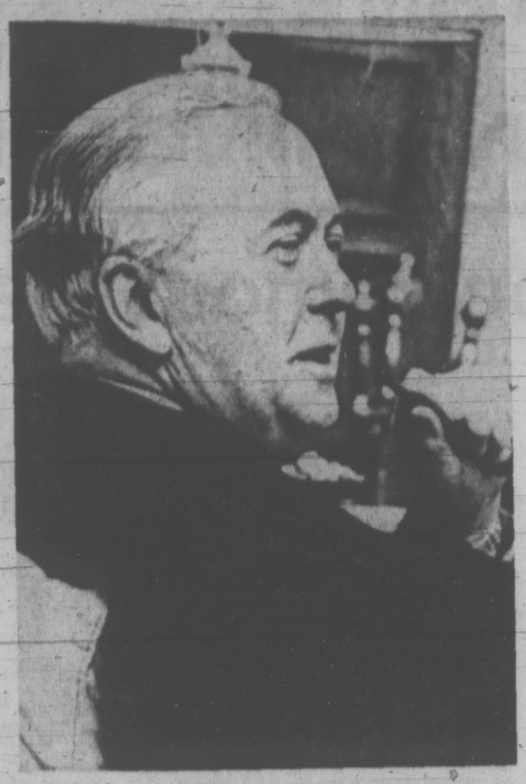
Barriers Weaken

Well, again. Many intelligent people, including onpaper Mr Munro, approve of a guaranteed annual income. The Maritime provinces and the Prairie provinces know that union makes sense, and have even held discussions on the matter.

And there is no lack of reports — or of government statements and actions — to assert that the weakness and uncompetitiveness of much Canadian industry is directly related to the barriers which protect it from outside competition.

It is worth noting, too, that Alberta Premier Peter Loughheed and Ontario Premier Davis exhibit discontent with the many forms that equalization payments take, and the depressing effect they can have on their own provincial economies.

Finally, British Columbia, for weeks now, has been intermittently cut off from the rest of Canada because of two airline strikes sanctioned by the federal government, and is entitled to anger. It may be angry to more purpose than Mr. Trudeau expects.



WILSON
. . . believes in nothing

viewpoint

He Turned the Dream Sour

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

LONDON — The House of Commons lends itself to drama. The overcrowded benches, the cockpit with the opponents only a pace or two apart — all that is why, when the chamber was bombed, Churchill insisted on rebuilding it exactly as it had been.

In every generation there seems to come a moment in that chamber that illuminates the political condition of Britain. So it was on the night of Feb. 17, 1972. No one who was there is likely to forget the red-faced fury from the Labor benches after the vote of 309 to 301 that barely saved the Conservative government's European policy and its life.

It was an ugly scene, including a physical assault on the leader of the Liberal Party, Jeremy Thorpe, because five Liberal votes had made the difference. But the significance of that moment lay less in the tempers displayed than in what was disclosed about the condition of the Labor Party and its leader, Harold Wilson.

Seven years ago, when I first watched that House, a new Labor government under Wilson was the hope of Britain. It embodied the yearning for renewal in this country, for an end to slow, stale decline, for the beginning of fresh national adventure — an Elizabethan spirit adapted to a scientific age.

How cynical it sounds now even to recall those dreams. For they have turned to dust. The Labor Party has no dreams any more, and no visible policy for the great issues facing Britain. Instead of a brave vision of the future it has a sour fixation on the past.

Look down at the Labor front bench that night, and there they were: the sour men, the men afraid of change. Most important, there was Wilson himself, denouncing the very principles that he had proclaimed himself when he was prime minister.

"The unity of Europe is going to be forged," Wilson said in 1967, "and geography and history and sentiment alike demand that we play our part in forging it."

But now, when that or 100 other quotations are read to him, he insists that they meant something else. And he does not just say that black is white: he says it with passion, with a fine outrage that anyone could believe otherwise.

Harold Wilson is living proof of what one man can do to his party, and to the public's faith in politics, by lack of principle. And it not just the European issue.

As leader of the Opposition he denounces racism when he perceives it in the government's policy. As prime minister he pushed through Parliament the most nakedly racist piece of legislation in recent British history — a bill excluding one group of British citizens from entering this country because of their color.

Now he denounces the proposed settlement with the white rebel regime in Rhodesia. When he held power, he refused to use force against the rebellion and desperately sought a settlement himself.

In opposition he stands four-square behind the coal miner's claim for a 25 per cent wage increase and supports their strike although they have used violent and illegal picketing and have brought the country to its knees. As prime minister, facing a much less serious strike of seamen in 1966, his reaction was to call it a Communist conspiracy.

On the last day of the debate on Europe, Wilson opposed the government's bill to bring Britain into the Common Market because of what he said it would do to the rights and great traditions of the House of Commons. That night he stood by while his colleagues brought the doctrine of brute force into the chamber.

Of course politics is not a moral picnic. No politician can vote his principles every time, rigidly, without compromise. Politics is give and take.

But to believe in nothing — and then to weep as if there were a principle is not to play the game of democratic politics either. It is to corrupt belief.

To call Wilson an opportunist is not really to convey the import of what he has done to his party and his people. He must know now that for Britain to go back on her pledge to the Common Market would wreck this country's international reputation and its economic hopes. He is prepared to let the wreck occur because someone else is doing what he wanted to do as prime minister.

The old warning was against those wielding power without responsibility. We see now that ambition without principle is just as dangerous.

The sad thing is that the Labor Party still ought to be the hope of Britain for a reawakening to new ideas and bold visions. But it can never be that under the leadership of the man who killed the Dream.

The City-Dweller Also Deserves a Vote

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

What will your vote be worth, this election year? The answer to that will depend on where you live. If you live in York-Scarborough, your vote will be worth one-ninth of one vote's value in Yukon.

We were reminded of the continuing disparities in our electoral system by the farewell speech of that old buccaneer Joe Smallwood, who went out warning the Newfoundland Liberals of an "infamous Tory plot" to strengthen the representation of the one-third of the island's people who live in cities.

CASTONGUAY
. . . not ready

We'll let Joe worry about the loss of Liberal lobby fodder from the outports. We're more concerned with securing long-delayed justice for Canada's urban voters.

By the year 2001 said the Lithwick report on cities, 94 per cent of Canadians will live in the cities, 73 per cent of them in the 12 biggest urban areas.

Yet, if our electoral reforms move ahead at their present pace, city-dwellers will even then be drastically underrepresented in the Commons and the provincial legislatures.

When you vote this year, you'll use electoral boundaries established in 1966, when the population of York-Scarborough was 139,535 and that of Yukon 14,382. Your vote in the election of 1968 was based on a redistribution carried through after the census of 1961. In six federal elections before that — those of 1953, '57, '58, '62, '63 and '65 — you used outmoded boundaries based on the 1951 census. The effects of obsolescent electoral maps could be politically decisive then. If Lester Pearson, for instance, had fought the 1965 election on an electoral map corresponding to 1965 population figures, he would have won the government majority he pined for so long. Now there is a bill before the Commons to increase the size of House to 270, adding five seats for populous Ontario and three for B.C., continuing the shift to stronger urban representation. But no reform based on the last census can be effected before 1974. And by then it will be out of date. The fatal time lag will not have been beaten.

It isn't exclusively a federal problem. Provinces, too, fail to catch up to population change. Ontario is notorious for the rural over-representation so felicitious for Tory governments. Quebec still has the 17 "rotten boroughs" conceded to English voters at the time of Confederation.

We'd like to see the whole process revolutionized. In the computer age, it seems to us, it's indefensible that electoral boundaries should lag years behind the changes in population. If the computers of Statistics Canada are fed the proper data, they have the facility to produce highly accurate projections of growth. We'd like to see the maps redrawn — in anticipation of the changes that will occur before a forthcoming election.

We have to concede that Nelson Castonguay, Ottawa's Representation Commissioner and unquestionably the nation's top electoral authority, is not ready to accept this as a practical way of doing things. Nonetheless, we would like to see it tried. We doubt that it would produce more anomalies than the present system.

One cautionary word. Representation is not a mechanical thing; computers must not have the last word. We shall always need the independent boundary commissions with their special local sensibilities. It can be argued that, in spite of rural over-representation, Canada's farm community has not had a generous political hearing of late.

The tractor parades protesting the death of the family farm and the almost desperate unanimity of farming communities in Saskatchewan's last election implied a profound disenchantment with federal politics. The pendulum must not swing so far that such special needs are disregarded.

There's a job here, we think, for a Senate committee. Let it examine, first, the possibility of fighting a national election on a map drawn up from projections, ahead of the event. Then, let it build in safeguards to prevent a monolithic preponderance of urban power in the future Canada. Senators are well set up to do it — they don't depend on voters at all.

It's a Complicated World

RUSSELL BAKER

It used to seem dumb of the United States not to recognize China. It was there, wasn't it? How could any sensible country go on pretending that China was over on Formosa in the uninspiring hatband of Generalissimo Chiang Kaishek? The trouble with the Generalissimo, Sen. Tom Connally had once said, was "not enough general-ing and too much issimoing." Still, John Foster Dulles knew his business, didn't he?

Well, maybe he did. Maybe he did at that. Now that Richard Nixon is finally recognizing China, many of us may want to hesitate before going along with the new policy.

For over 20 years, most of us have cultivated a flourishing ignorance of China. It was easy enough to cultivate. Few of us knew much to begin with, and what little we did know was probably nonsense culled from "Terry and the Pirates," and the "War Cards" that came free with our bubble-gum and Hollywood.

There were men named "Wong," and there were menacing war lords who looked like Akim Tamiroff, and ricksha boys and coolies with hair done up in queues, and somewhere in the neighborhood a laundry where they put 10 pounds of starch in the collars and were supposed to say "no tickee, no shirtee," and maybe really did say it, although it now seems impossible.

If all this suggests that our view of China was condescending, it is probably because it was, but it would be a mistake to suggest that our condescension sprang from any racial ill feeling. In those days we felt fairly condescending to everybody, from the English to the Eskimos. We were wonderfully undiscriminating about whom we would feel superior to. Americans were simply the best of all possible people, and everybody else was pretty much hopeless, although some people were nicer than others.

The Chinese, in fact, were probably thought of in relatively flattering terms, even by the mass of Americans unaware of China's long history, art, science and culture. In a crude but nonetheless well-disposed way, the popularity of "Charlie Chan" reflected the general American feeling that wisdom, intelligence, respect for institutions and strong family loyalty were typical Chinese virtues.

Everyone, of course, knew of the agony of the Chinese during the years of the Japanese invasion and sympathized with their suffering. In our innocent fashion, after the Japanese had finally turned upon us and brought us into the war, we were warmed by the sentimental thought of fighting beside suffering China and, partly for this reason, we were doubly horrified when suffering China a few years later chose Communism over Generalissimo-ism.

Then, non-recognition.

In the 20 years and more that have passed, most of us have learned a great deal about the rest of the world. It has not been easy.

We have had to learn that Tarzan was not Africa — and, that hurt — that Europe was not Elsa Maxwell cruising around on yachts, that there may be wars which even Americans can't win.

We performed prodigies of self-educating during the generation China was being nonrecognized.

We learned to speak a little French, to order a meal in German, to sit through an opera in Milan. A lot of us now know where Bolivia is located, and the Gaza Strip, and Jakarta. If pressed, we could, most of us, probably find our way from Cairo to Athens without a tour guide.

It is foolish to say that we have "grown up," because another 20 years will doubtless leave us looking back to 1972 and smiling at our immaturity. But we have learned to quit condescending to everybody but ourselves, and we have learned that the world is a painfully complicated society, and we have learned that there are some problems that just cannot be solved for a generation or two, even by Americans.

Now, suddenly, we are confronted with China. Six hundred or eight hundred million persons. We don't even know the population within 150 million; neither do the Chinese. It's not just a country we suddenly have to learn about; it's a whole new world. A mysterious geography, a language from outer space, a history as complicated as the entire history of Western civilization, policitians we have never heard of, customs and idiosyncrasies we have never even dreamed of.

In short, the world — which was already far too big for us to understand — has been vastly enlarged overnight. It is more than a man should have to face — to tell him, just when he was beginning to think that he had obtained some slight grasp on the world, that — hah! — he hasn't even begun to do his homework yet, because — surprise! — Here's China.

Many of us will probably have to make a hard choice. We can continue our own private policies on nonrecognition, or we can tell ourselves, "I can recognize China, all right, but in order to handle it I shall have to de-recognize Europe or Africa or South America."

Low-Interest Loans Urged for Farmers

The federal government should initiate a program of low-interest loans to help farmers, Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Wednesday.

Shelford said he favors such a program on a national scale because to do it provincially would create serious inequalities between farmers of different provinces.

Low-interest loans to Quebec poultry raisers already have caused trouble on national markets he said, because Quebec farmers can market their produce cheaper than others.

Shelford said B.C. farmers have the highest gross and net incomes of all provinces in Canada but the size of the average net income — $3,727 compared to the national $2,165 — shows the financial problems facing farmers.

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) had urged the government to create a fund to provide low-interest loans to farmers.

Interest should be as low as one-half per cent merely for bookkeeping purposes. Loans should be used for capital investment, Hartley said.

He said 17 major food processing plants in B.C. have shut down since Social Credit came to power.

"They were shut down because Del Monte, a foreign-controlled corporation bought them up and found it was better for their economics to have the processing done south of the border," Hartley said.

Don Marshall (SC—South Peace River) said farmers in the Peace River are facing conditions similar to the "hungry 30s."

Marshall predicted the farm credit corporation delinquency rate on loans will reach 40 per cent this year in the Peace.

CAN'T GET PARTS

As a result, he said, "We have not one machinery dealer left in the south Peace River." Nor can farmers buy parts for their machines, he said.

He called on the government to create a provincial farm marketing corporation controlled by producers with money to loan for establishment of processing plants.

He noted Alberta has created a $50 million incentive fund for development of processing plants.

"Our government requires some bold new policies in order to meet this very dangerous situation in our province today."

FARM DESTROYED

Hartley also said 10,000 acres of provincial farmland have been taken out of production for use as rights-of-way for crown corporations and railways.

There is no need for these rights-of-way to be so large as to destroy farms. The problem is particularly evident in Delta, he said.

Hartley also urged Shelford to fight the trend of "vertically integrated corporations" taking over small farms. He said the minister should create a system of producer marketing boards capable of dealing with all stages of food production, processing and distribution.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said a problem for Island milk producers has been created by Safeway food stores and "another chain store" which bring their own brands of milk from the mainland to the Island.

The answer is in creation of regional markets in B.C., he said.

Hard Sell Urged For Apples

The provincial government was told Wednesday it is doing a poor job of selling B.C. apples.

More imagination is needed to promote the hard-pressed B.C. apple, MLAs told Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford during debate on his spending estimates in the legislature.

Farmers' markets where "orchard-run" apples could be sold cheaply — without benefit of expensive handling and packaging — were suggested.

NDP Leader Dave Barrett once again challenged the government to sell apples in liquor stores — "I can't think of anything better to get high on than a great big Red Delicious," he said.

Shelford was also told by NDP members to do something about keeping foreign apples from being dumped on the B.C. market at the peak of the B.C. season.

When the minister complained that import quotas are under federal jurisdiction and there are no easy answers, Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) broke up the House by saying, "Oh, we just set policy — you look after details."

B.C. Egg Board Under Fire

The B.C. Egg Marketing Board was fried in the legislature Wednesday with complains about domination by Fraser Valley producers and discrimination against other areas of the province.

A call for a judicial or legislative committee inquiry about a possible conflict of interest by one board member was issued by one MLA. Another said the board should be dissolved if it doesn't start being fair to producers from all over the province.

The subject arose during debate on spending estimates of Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford, whose salary vote passed after four hours of debate. Other department votes remain to be approved.

INVESTIGATION URGED

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby Edmonds) said either a judicial inquiry or a legislative committee investigation is needed into possible conflicts of interest of a B.C. Egg Marketing Board member.

He said John Unger is both a member of the board and of the Fraser Egg and Poultry Co-operative Association, a producer group.

Dowding said such conflicts are forbidden by the cabinet and he raised the possibility that board decisions during Unger's tenure were illegal.

Dowding said there have been charges of lower mainland domination of the board and noted that the board is currently suing a Prince George area producer for $21,000 for over-production.

The MLA said the government had a duty to step in if "one area in effect aggrandizes the market and another has to pay the piper."

PROBLEMS

In a general reply about marketing board affairs, Shelford said he was aware of "problems" but the government's attitude is that the producers should try to "get their own house in order" before direct government action is taken.

He said the whole situation was being looked into "carefully."

Shelford said he agreed it is "generally correct" that lower mainland producers dominate the egg board.

Dudley Little (SC—Skeena) also complained about discrimination by the board against northern farmers and chided the agriculture department.

"The minister and his assistants have got bogged down in a mire of manure and bureaucracy," he said.

The department should either take action to improve the operation of the board or dissolve it entirely, he said.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said marketing boards are working against farmers' interests.

"You don't have to be a chicken to know a good egg from a bad one and you don't have to be a farmer to know the farmer is getting a bad deal in British Columbia," Williams said.

He said the boards now are working in their own interests instead of in the interests of the farmers.

For example, he said, B.C.'s turkey marketing board won't permit development of a provincial turkey egg producing industry.

B.C. imports an estimated 1 to 1.5 million turkey eggs yearly instead of developing its own hens, Williams said.

CONFLICT

He also claimed there is a conflict between the egg marketing board and the broiler marketing board. The broiler board sets a price for purchase of chicks and the egg board regulates the output price of eggs in hatcheries, he said.

The prices conflict, causing problems for farmers, Williams said.

Shelford should not blame Ottawa for provincial farm problems, said Williams, and marketing boards are a subject he can improve on immediately.

"The nasty old federal government is not involved in that aspect at all," Williams said.

He also called on the minister to study the impact of lower mainland milk on Vancouver Island's dairy industry.

Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) renewed an earlier attack on the quality of potatoes marketed by the potato marketing board and called for more incentive for producers to market good quality produce.

Airmen Seized

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Eighteen airmen from the U.S. Air Force base at Torrejon near here have been arrested on drug charges, American military and embassy officials said Monday. Reports said the arrests followed the death Jan. 27 of a Frenchwoman who fell from a Madrid apartment balcony during a marijuana-LSD party.

Reminiscing with the Colonel

My secret® recipe.

"After I'd been in business for a while, I got quite a reputation for my food, so I moved across the road to a bigger restaurant. Even then I found difficulty in keeping up with the orders for my chicken. Pan frying was just too slow, so I got eight of those new pressure cooker gadgets. First off it was trial and error, till I worked out the time, pressure and temperature — and after that I never looked back.

One thing was worrying me, I guess I'm like a lot of cooks, I like to try something new. I wanted to add a new ingredient to that blend of herbs and spices that complemented my chicken, but folks around were braggin' so on my chicken that I was afraid they wouldn't like a change. Then one day a fellow gave me 500 orders of chicken for a boat trip on Cumberland Lake, so I took the chance and put in a couple of handfuls of the new ingredient. I tell you, I couldn't wait to taste that chicken. When I did, it was just the best chicken I ever put in my mouth and I haven't changed that blend of herbs and spices to this day."

Like a lot of great discoveries, the Colonel developed his secret recipe almost by accident. It was a lucky day for the lovers of Kentucky Fried Chicken when the Colonel got the order for that chicken. Today, the recipe is still a carefully guarded secret, because it's that very special blend of herbs and spices, which give Kentucky Fried Chicken it's unique taste. Add to that the special training the Colonel's boys receive and the care and attention given to the quality of the ingredients and you have the reasons why Kentucky Fried Chicken is 'finger lickin' good' every time.

Kentucky Fried Chicken.
Colonel Sanders and his boys make it "finger lickin' good"

MPs Told Industrial Strategy Slated for Discussion Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's promised industrial strategy will be announced in the next few months, Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the Commons Wednesday.

He was speaking during the fourth of eight days of Commons debate on last Thursday's throne speech, in which the industrial strategy was among the policy plans sketched by the government for the current parliamentary session.

The debate continues today.

Mr. Pepin said he will, in coming weeks, outline the problems involved in making necessary compromises and setting priorities. He will also give the history of various sectors of the economy and suggest how the new strategy will be put into effect.

He said his officials are already talking to businessmen, getting their views about the new "global" approach to economic planning.

The Wednesday sitting ended with the Liberal majority outvoting the three opposition parties to defeat Social Credit and Conservative amendments to the Liberal motion approving the throne speech.

The amendments charged the government with mismanaging economy.

In the Senate's throne-speech debate, Opposition Leader Jacques Flynn (Quebec) said the government is guilty of chronic mishandling of the economy.

He accused the government of economic bungling and excessive interference in the economy, saying it was run by men "who long ago cast their lot with the noisy anti-capitalists of the left."

In the Commons, Mr. Pepin said Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield had been pious in urging an over-all industrial strategy that would spur growth in all sectors.

The problem, the minister said, is to reconcile conflicting goals within an economic plan and decide what aims are most important.

He also defended government handling of the trade talks with the United States, saying it has been combining flexibility with toughness.

He said that to disclose the government bargaining position in the negotiations would destroy its chances of success.

He said the government is making unprecedented efforts to increase exports to other countries, citing trade missions he has led abroad and invitations to foreign businessmen to visit Canada.

ESTIMATES TABLED

Earlier, the Commons received the government's spending estimates for the fiscal year that begins April 1.

Expenditures, loans, investments and old age security payments are projected at $18,809,080,169. (See also page 16).

C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board, told the House the government is giving top priority to regional expansion, protecting and improving the environment, assistance to Indians and Eskimos and foreign aid.

Former NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said government statements about the economy's health show it complacent and self-satisfied.

Only large corporations—not the majority of Canadians—are in good economic shape, he said.

Counting manpower department trainees, married women and Indians—who are not included in unemployment figures—he estimated that 750,000 Canadians are unemployed.

Statistics Canada reported 665,000 out of work in January.

Yacht Club Breakwater Vote Slated

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will hold a special meeting Thursday, March 9, to vote on funding for a proposed $193,600 rubble breakwater in Cadboro Bay.

Of the amount neded, it is hoped that $60,000 will be raised through $100 debentures and another $110,000 made available through a bank loan. The balance will be taken from the club's capital funds.

The club received permission from the federal department of transport to build the breakwater Jan. 11.

The club amended its original plans to build a wooden pile breakwater after considerable opposition from Uplands residents and conservationists.

Pro and anti-breakwater supporters attended a public hearing last April and Oak Bay council unanimously approved the club's revised application June 14.

AB KENT - EDITOR

Am. Air

American Airlines Inc. substantially reduced its loss in January from the same time a year ago.

The company said it had a net loss of $1.99 million (seven cents a share) compared with $7.10 million (35 cents) in January, 1971.

Pan Am

Pan American World Airways, citing increased operating and maintenance costs, reports a net loss of $12.9 million (32 cents a share) for January.

For the same month last year, Pan Am listed a net loss of $8.7 million 124 cents.

Petrofina

Petrofina Canada Ltd. reports consolidated net income of $18 ($1.81 a share) in 1971, compared with $15 million ($1.51) in 1970.

The 1971 figure took into account an operating loss of $1.18 million incurred during the year in the iron powder division of Fina Metal Ltd.

After extraordinary items consisting of a write-off of $3.44 million representing development and start-up costs off the iron powder project deferred in previous years, and a profit of $1.98 million from the sale of fixed assets, net income was $16.6 million ($1.66) compared with $16.55 million ($1.66).

Union

Union Oil Co. of Canada Ltd. Earned $9.8 million (2.04 a share) during 1971, up from $6.1 million ($1.28) the previous year.

Gross income increased 17 per cent to $47.8 million while cash flow went to $24.6 million from $19.9 million.

Westcoast

Westcoast Petroleum Ltd. had a profit of $4.27 million during 1971 compared with $3 million in 1970.

After payment of dividends, this shrunk to $2.34 million (58 cents) a common share compared with $1.46 million (36 cents).

The company said the increase was due mainly to higher oil and gas sales, lower interest payments and reduced income tax.

McIntyre

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. reports a loss of $3 million ($1.26 a share) during 1971, compared with a profit of $5.4 million ($2.24) a year earlier.

Main reasons for the drop were a $7.18 million loss in the company's Smoky River coal operation and a reduction in investment income.

Revenue from operations and investments was $30.6 million, up from $17.2 million. There was sharp increase in depreciation and interest charges.

Star

Toronto Star Ltd. reports net profit for the three months to Dec. 31, of $996,000 (41 cents a share) down from $1.15 million (48 cents) in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Revenue from operations during the quarter was $17.9 million up from $13.95 million a year earlier.

Greyhound

Grehound Computer of Canada Ltd. showed slightly less revenue in 1971, dropping to $4.9 million fro $4.99 million but ending the year slightly improved in earnings.

The fourth quarter yielded five cents a share compared with three cents a year earlier, while the share income for the full 12 months amounted to 18 cents vs. 13 cents.

Both years included extraordinary gains — $18,000 last year and $105,869 the year before

Selkirk

All of its broadcasting interests contributed to $2 million net income reported by Selkirk Holdings Ltd. in the year ended Dec. 31.

The company said gross revenue was $18 million ($11 million) and share earings 99.47 cest compared with 68.56 cents before a 9.94 cent extraordinary gain.

Fraser

An operating loss of $4.85 million in 1971 compares with a $2.6 million profit earned in the previous year by Fraser Companies Ltd.

Sales last year dropped from $73.7 million to $62.6 million.

In 1970 share earnings were $1.12 from operations and $2.92 from a non-recurring gain.

J & J

Johnson and Johnson reported 1971 earnings of $101.8 million ($1.82 a share), up 22 per cent from the $83.6 million ($1.51) earned in 1970.

Sales climbed 14 per cent to $1.1 billion from $1 billion.

During the fourth quarter ended Jan. 2, the producer of health-care products reported a 12 per cent jump in earnings to $25 million (45 cents) compared with $22 million (41 cents) the previous year.

Sales for the quarter totalled $285 million, 13 per cent higher than the previous year's $252.4 million.

Texas Gulf

Texas Gulf Sulphur spent $7.68 million more on exploration last year for a total $11.64 million outlay, thereby reducing considerably its net operating income.

The U.S. company also said gross sales were lower, although full details were not readily available.

New Issue

A new $50 million debenture issue due in 1978 and extendable to 1992 is offered by the Bank of Montreal.

Bearing interest at 7 per cent, the bonds are priced to 99.50 to yield 7.1 per cent to 1978 and 7.32 per cent to 1992. They are dated April 1.

Election for the extension must be made between April, 1977, and October, 1977. The issue will be non-callable before April, 1986.

Canada Must Protect Trade With Chinese

REGINA (CP) — Canada's markets in China can be protected only by balancing trade between the two countries, former conservative agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton said here.

Hamilton, Conservative candidate in Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain for the next federal election, said Canada's current trade preference is threatened by an easing of political feelings between China and the Americans and Australians.

President Nixon's visit to China indicates a softening of the hard-line stand with the result that prospects for American exports to China will multiply.

To fight this competition, Hamilton said, Canada must increase imports from China to offset a $175 million trade imbalance which Canada now enjoys.

He said the imbalance must also be changed to ensure other exports to China such as farm machinery, chemical fertilizer, newsprint, minerals and lumber which China now is seeking from North America.

Embarrassed Brokers Face Fines

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — An investigation triggered by a Philadelphia teenager who bought and sold $200,000 worth of blue chip stock without spending a penny last month may end soon with disciplinary action against several prominent brokers.

Lee D. Arning, senior vice-president for operations at the New York Stock Exchange said Wednesday that fines and censure would be levied against six brokers if it was found they violated exchange rules by selling stock — sight unseen — to Abraham Treff.

Treff, 19, armed only with a telephone and a convincing voice, bought and sold such blue chip stocks as Polaroid and IBM without ever meeting his brokers face-to-face.

Arning said the whole incident was a "giant embarrassment" to the NYSE.

Treff, a St. Joseph's College student, said he wanted to show that brokers sometimes ignore exchange regulations.

By the time the brokerage houses caught up with Treff, he had disposed of his shares and was writing a 60-page report on the episode for the NYSE.

"We've just about completed our investigation and developed the facts on how he accomplished it," Arning said. "We'll go over the facts next week and the steps to take."

$1 Billion Suit Filed Against GM

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A $1-billion suit was filed against General Motors Corp. Wednesday by irate car owners trying to get the corporation to replace motor mounts on 6.7 million Chevrolets.

The class action suit filed in federal court by three woman Chevrolet owners charged General Motors with breach of warranty, fraud and misrepresentation in the sale of Chevrolets produced between 1965 and 1969.

It said the company, which recently recalled the 6.7 million cars was patching up the mount by putting a strap on them instead of replacing the mount.

"This is a band-aid approach to the problem," said C. Glen Handy, husband of one of the plaintiffs.

He said replacement of the part would cost $38.65 for each car with parts and labor, but the strap was costing the corporation only $5 for each car.

$90 MILLION DEAL

WINNIPEG (CP) — A. S. Leach, chairman of Federal Grain Ltd., said Wednesday earnings from the company's grain operations have fluctuated considerably for several years and in three of the last five years, have been insufficient to cover the company's dividends.

Leach made the statement in a letter to shareholders prior to a meeting March 10, which will be asked to ratify sale of Federal's grain assets to the three Prairie wheat pools for about $90 million.

Grain earnings over the period average 49.9 cents a share, from a high of 93.9 cents to a low of 5.4 cents. The high was in 1970-71.

Leach said that for the company to remain effectively in the grain trade it is estimated that normal replacement and extraordinary capital expenditures for the next five years would be more than $25 million, considerably in excess of cash generated from depreciation and anticipated earnings.

Leach said the offer from the pools after provision for income taxes, employee separations and other costs, represents a cash value of about $25 million or $7.30 per common share.

The company's subsidiaries not included in the sale — Neptune Terminals Ltd., Panco Poultry Ltd. and Standard Aero Engine Ltd. — are valued at about $13 million.

Leach said the cash resources from the grain sale would be used to strengthen the subsidiaries and to seek attractive investment and development opportunities.

Tax Airplanes

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Municipal treasurer Bruce Miles wants airport users taxed $1 each to clear a deficit which ran to more than $11,000 in 1971. Council will negotiate with the federal transport department for the levy.

Survey Shows Substantial Cuts In Planned Capital Investment

OTTAWA (CP) — A survey by the Economic Council of Canada indicates substantial declines in planned capital investment in most economic sectors for each year from 1973 to 1976.

A report on the survey says it is normal for levels of intended capital investment to decline somewhat toward the end of a five-year forecast period, but the survey results show a decline much greater and beginning much earlier than normal.

The survey, based on the spending intentions of more than 200 corporations, universities and governments, was conducted by the council and the industry department last October.

The council report shows that manufacturing firms intend to invest in 1976 only 66.8 per cent of what they spent on capital investment in 1971. Mining companies plan capital investments of only 15.1 per cent of 1971 levels.

Other 1976 planned capital investment, as a percentage of 1971 investment, includes: food and beverages, 54.9; pulp and paper, 47.2; chemicals 40.2; universities 61; and governments, 89.6.

FOUR RAISE SIGHTS

Only four sectors plan to spend more on capital investment in 1976 than 1971: transportation equipment, 104.4 per cent; "other manufacturing" 106.8 per cent; telecommunications 124 per cent; and power utilities, 105.7 per cent.

For all survey respondents, 1976 capital investment is expected to be 83.2 per cent of 1971 levels.

The survey was undertaken two months after President Nixon announced a 10-per-cent surtax on imports to the U.S. But the report says "there was little evidence, however, that the new U.S. policies had had significant impact on the capital investment intentions of the survey firms in the relatively brief period since the policies were announced in mid-August."

The report noted that "concern was expressed again this year by the business officials interviewed over pending Canadian legislation in the fields of taxation, labor relations and competition policy."

Part of the survey results were released last November by Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin. His announcement said that capital investment would increase by three per cent in 1972, compared with 10 per cent in 1971.

No mention was made in Pepin's announcement of the forecast decline in investment after 1973. Pepin's news release also said investment intentions at that time reflected businessmen's reactions to the U.S. surtax announced Aug. 15 — a statement contrary to this week's council report.

The report also said its figures differ from those announced by the industry department because the report does not include the effects of inflation.

Survey participants were asked to base their estimates of future capital investment on 1971 dollars or to advise what allowance they had made for price changes from 1971 levels.

BREAKTHROUGH

INTRODUCING THE PACE-SETTING MAZDA 808

The Mazda 808 Sports Coupe.

Here's the fast-paced performance you always wanted. The sleek lines of luxury you didn't think you could afford. The quiet. The comfort. The safety. The engineering excellence.

Mazda's put it all together in a package and a price that's as easy on the eye as it is on your budget.

BREAK THROUGH TO WIDE-STANCE STYLING
Mazda 808 looks great coming and going. It sits low, wide and handsome with eager fastback lines that tell you at a glance what a performer this is. Even when it's parked.

BREAK THROUGH TO FASTBACK PERFORMANCE
Mazda's spirited 1600 cc overhead cam engine gives you fastback performance that's easy to take—and tough to overtake. Choose a silk-smooth, all-synchromesh four-on-the-floor or optional automatic. Take her over the rutted roads or let her loose on the freeway; Mazda's suspension system gives you the stability of a big car ride plus responsive handling that makes Mazda 808 more fun on four wheels than anything in its class.

BREAK THROUGH TO INTERIOR LUXURY
Slide behind the woodgrain wheel. Mazda 808 Sports Coupe surrounds you with cockpit comfort and flight-deck instrumentation: reclining hi-back front buckets; door-to-door carpeting; center console, ammeter, tachometer, trip meter and clock; a single five-function lever gives you fingertip control of your two-speed wipers, windshield washer, lights, dimmer and directional signals...plus a host of standard features that make this all-new Mazda a truly beautiful buy.

BREAK THROUGH TO DRIVING SAFETY
Mazda 808 Sports Coupe appeals to your senses—and your good sense. Because safety never looked this good before. You get Mazda's safe semi-monocoque body construction; front disc brakes for sure stopping power; a powerful heater and an electric rear window defroster for all-round, all-weather visibility; energy-absorbing steering column; a laminated and tinted windshield...and the list goes on. You can't buy a better car to save your life.

So break through to a new dimension in driving. Choose the Mazda 808 Sports Coupe at $2,599* or the 4-door Sedan at $2,549*. They're at your dealers now.

F-310* and the care and feeding of your automobile.

A clean engine is a healthy engine. F-310, one of the most important developments in automotive fuel technology in years, helps clean critical parts of dirty engines and keeps clean engines clean. If your car runs on gasoline, use a Chevron gasoline with F-310. Here's why:

Peace of mind.

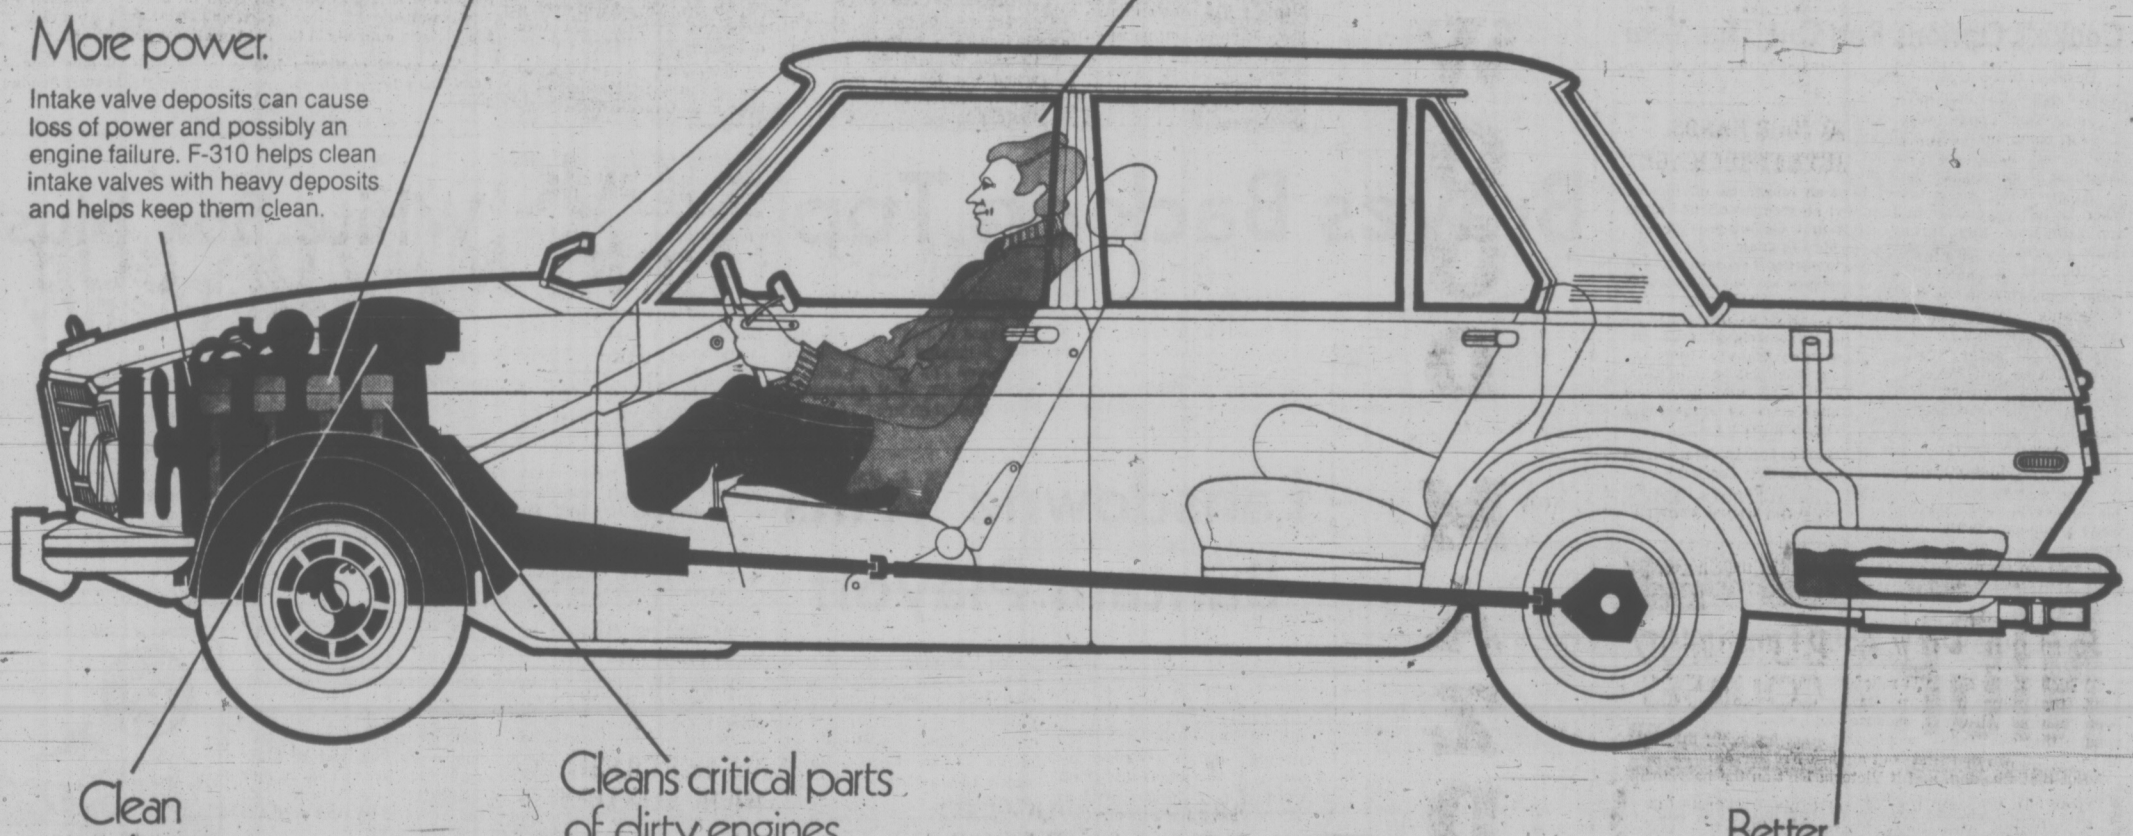
F-310 will make you a lot happier. Because you're feeding your car one of the best gasolines on the market.

Cleans P.C.V. valve.

Deposits in the Positive Crankcase Ventilation valve lead to reduced performance of your car's engine. F-310 helps keep your P.C.V. valve clean.

More power.

Intake valve deposits can cause loss of power and possibly an engine failure. F-310 helps clean intake valves with heavy deposits and helps keep them clean.



Clean carburetor throttle body.

Cleans critical parts of dirty engines.

Stay ahead . . . improve engine efficiency, reduce maintenance costs and obtain better mileage.

Hot Ranger Unit Continues To Produce at Record Pace

New York's GAG Line is on the verge of establishing two National Hockey League records and could set a third if it continues its torrid scoring pace.

The line, so named earlier in the season after it began scoring a goal a game, was true to form Wednesday night, scoring two goals in the Rangers' 4-3 victory over Philadelphia Flyers.

In other games, Buffalo Sabres, with an assist from their opponents, defeated Chicago Black Hawks 2-1, Boston Bruins rallied to beat California Golden Seals 8-6, Toronto Maple Leafs shut out Pittsburgh Penguins 2-0 and St. Louis Blues blanked Los Angeles Kings by the same score.

Jean Ratelle, the leading scorer on the GAG Line, got his 46th goal of the season, scoring in the second period against Philadelphia. Vic Hadfield also scored, his 40th. Rod Gilbert, the third member of the line, did not score Wednesday night but he is only one goal away from his 40th and when he reaches that mark the line will become the first in NHL history to have each member with 40 or more goals in a season.

HAVE 288 POINTS

Additionally, the line is close to establishing a record of having each member score 100 points or more in a season. Gilbert is nine points and Hadfield 11 away from 100 points while Ratelle, who replaced Boston's Phil Esposito as the NHL 's scoring leader, has 108 points.

The Ratelle-Hadfield-Gilbert line also has 288 points for the season, 48 short of the record set last season by the Esposito - Ken Hodge - Wayne Cashman line.

Ratelle's goal Wednesday night was the eighth straight game in which he scored, leaving him two short of the NHL record of 10 showed by former Ranger Andy Bathgate and Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks.

He also assisted on two goals to increase his points total to 108, one more than Esposito.

The Bruins, who were involved in a five-man trade Wednesday with California which sent all-star defenceman Carol Vadnais to Bruins, were trailing the Seals 6-1 before the game was half over.

But the Bruins exploded for two goals late in the second period and five more in the third to sink the Seals.

Fred Stanfield scored three goals for the Bruins to put them back in the game but it was Esposito's two goals less than three minutes apart that won the game for the Bruins, East Division leaders. Bobby Orr assisted on four goals.

Goalie Bernie Parent, who announced Tuesday he would jump to the rival World Hockey Association next year, gave the Leafs shutout goaltending and moved them back into a tie for fourth place in the NHL's East.

Brad Selwood and Ron Ellis scored for the Leafs, who were coached by vice-president King Clancy after regular coach John McLellan was admitted to hospital a few hours before the game to undergo tests for a stomach ailment.

Quebec Rink Needs Help From Walker

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Ken Weldon and his Quebec rink from Montreal will sit on the sidelines this afternoon during the ninth round of the Canadian senior men's curling championship, hoping British Columbia will defeat Alberta.

Weldon chalked up two wins Wednesday in the seventh and eighth rounds to move into sole possession of first place with a 7-1 record and gets the bye in the ninth round.

Alberta's Slim Otterson of Calgary, who had the bye in the eighth round, has a 6-1 record while Gordon Walker's B.C. foursome from Victoria hold third place with six wins and two losses.

Walker's rink — Wayne Winkler, O. J. Powell and Elmer Hoffman — continued to tread thin ice but managed to remain in contention for the crown with two more "skin-of-the-teeth" victories Wednesday.

Two games away from completion of their schedule, the Walker foursome eked out a 10-8 win over Northern Ontario before nipping Prince Edward Island 8-7 in a suspense-filled battle.

But a win over Alberta this afternoon and another victory over Saskatchewan on Friday would not necessarily produce a playoff chance for B.C. A second Seagram Stone triumph for B.C. would depend on a second defeat of Quebec — which looks quite capable of dealing with its remaining opposition.

In other ninth-round games today, New Brunswick meets Nova Scotia, Manitoba meets Northern Ontario, Prince Edward Island goes against Saskatchewan and Ontario plays Newfoundland.

When eighth-round play ended, N.B.'s Bob Oke from Moncton was in fourth place with a 5-3 record with N.S. and Manitoba tied in fifth with 4-3. Saskatchewan and Northern Ontario had 3-4 records in seventh place and P.E.I. was in sole possession of ninth spot with two wins and five losses.

TWO RINKS WINLESS

Stew Brown of Guelph, representing Ontario, and Newfoundland's Lew Budden of Buchans were both winless in seven games.

Quebec took a 9-6 win over Newfoundland in the seventh round and then went on to down Don Bauld's N.S. rink from Halifax 8-5 in the eighth round.

Don Brownridge led his Manitoba foursome from Portage la Prarie to a 6-4 victory over N.B. and then defeated Ontario 12-8.

Before sitting out the evening round, Alberta scored a 6-4 win over P.E.I. in the seve nth round.

SQUIRES SPLITS

Saskatchewan's Gene Squires from Saskatoon edged Ontario 7-6 in the seventh round but took an upset 8-7 loss from Northern Ontario in the eighth.

Old Customs Never Die; Only the Price Changeth

Old customs at new prices have been revived in the prize fight industry. Muhammad Ali will get $200,000 for trying to knock George Chuvalo down sometime soon at the Coliseum in Vancouver. The theme already is: "He's got to fall!"

Years ago, barnstorming was the rage with fight champions being seemingly content to make one-night stands for modest purses and easy opponents. Joe Louis, the former world heavyweight champion, once fought in Victoria, remember?

Now it is Ali who has added a new dimension. He was in Vancouver last month for an exhibition. For a few rounds he was paid something like $25,000 while grabbing off some of the adulation he craves. That's when he found out there was money in the town, and that's when he started flogging the idea that he would like one more chance to knock Chuvalo to the canvas. Preferably in Vancouver.

Because nobody has ever done that, you see. And the deal sold. Twenty-five Vancouver businessmen have agreed to underwrite the venture which carries with it a total tab of about $450,000.

Chuvalo, for his gallantry in accepting the offer, will get $60,000 whether he gets knocked down or not. And if he doesn't, where does that leave Ali? With a fat pay cheque, for sure.

But to get another crack at the champ, Joe Frazier, don't bet that he doesn't knock Chuvalo kicking. It's his way of keeping his name in lights.

Cooke's Options Run Out This Year

Besides, there is some suggestion that Ali will get to meet Frazier again this summer.

Jack Kent Cooke, who owns return rights to the championship bout, has been applying the pressure. Because if the fight doesn't go this year, Cooke's privileges that went with the $5 million he guaranteed the fighters the first time, run out.

At any rate, Ali is travel bent as he works up his case. When he left Vancouver in January, he stopped off at Calgary, and Edmonton. then turned south and visited the Virgin Islands. In April he goes to Tokyo, in May to Spain.

Aha, but in Vancouver, there was that "natural" lure of gold. Could Ali upend Canada's ranking heavyweight and forever upright George Chuvalo? And would it sell?

Maybe. Make that sure. Never underestimate the power of the sport fan's dollar. After all, the Canucks have been filling the place all winter; and they don't win too many. And neither will Chuvalo win this one. But will he keep standing? That's the intriguing case for the curious.

Let's see — $450,000 scaled down from $100 ringside would mean an average of about $20-$25 for a full house of 17,000 at the Coliseum. That's taking all other expenses into consideration, plus a healthy bite for the promoter.

And that $200,000 is more than Ali has recieved for a lot of his other keep-fit performances. Fact is it's almost a match for what is holding up the Cooke deal on the Ali-Frazier rematch. Under terms of the original contract, each fighter was to get only $250,000 for the second bout, because of their huge payday the first time.

Joe Louis Drew 2,500 Fans in City

Which is why Cooke is renegotiating at a feverish rate. He wants that rematch before Frazier decides to quit. This has been rumored. Ali won't, because right now he is fighting often enough that soon many people will start believing that maybe he really did win that first bout against Frazier.

But that's boxing, and if Victoria isn't on the barnstorming schedule any more, it once was.

Joe Louis appeared here in December of 1945, and you'll recognize the pre-fight buildup even that long ago.

The publicity blurb said that Louis would meet the former U.S. Navy heavyweight champion, Bob Fraser, and get this . . . "he would try and knock out Fraser, because in a recent bout at Sacramento, Fraser had given Louis 'a rough time' " . . . .

A crowd of 2,500 showed up at the Armories, and advertising man Michael East, who promoted the bout under the auspices of the Veterans of France, said afterwards he didn't make a bundle out of the fight, but he learned a lot.

The nut for that one here was $2,000. Later in Vancouver, Louis' take-home-pay was a paltry $4,245. Now Ali is to get $200,000, which comes under the heading of progress.

Or what was it Ali said originally when he was asked if he would like to meet Chuvalo again?

"I've got to see him fall."

Took Dive, Says Boxer, After Life Threatened

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Recreation Minister Larry Desjardins said today he has a statement from a Detroit heavyweight which says the fighter was threatened and told to lose a fight to Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo in the second round.

The boxer, Jim Christopher, was said to have made the charge in a statement to a Winnipeg lawyer Wednesday. The lawyer, Ron Meyers, turned the statement over today to Desjardins, who has jurisdiction over the provincial boxing commission.

Desjardins told reporters today the statement from Christopher "claims he took a dive and that his life was threatened."

TOLD TO LOSE

Reading from the statement, Desjardins said Christopher was approached by an unidentified man in his room in a downtown hotel and told to lose the fight.

"It was a guy who went to my room at the Marlborough Hotel and who said if I wanted to go back to Detroit alive the fight would be over in two.

"No hits in the face to George. That was it. If you want to go home, get the hell out of here.

"He was a white man, dressed in a coat, uncertain as to age. My trainer, Lee Krantz, was there also."

Desjardins Wednesday ordered the boxing commission to carry out separate investigations of the four-fight card at the Winnipeg Arena.

DIED FROM INJURIES

In the final fight on the card, Stewart Gray of Toronto was knocked out by Canadian light-heavyweight champion Al Sparks of Winnipeg. Gray died about 24 hours later in hospital from head injuries.

Desjardins said Wednesday there also were suspicions raised by one of the referees that one of the fighters in the first two bouts may have deliberately feigned a knockout.

Chuvalo, who was to have signed next day in Vancouver for a March 13 bout with former world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, fought third on the card before about 1,500 spectators.

Chuvalo and his manager, Irving Ungerman, later postponed the signing as a result of the death of the 27-year-old Gray, who also was managed by Ungerman.

RACE STARTS TONIGHT FOR SHUTTLE TITLES

Wayne MacDonnell, several-time Canadian champion, will be part of a large contingent from the Lower Mainland, while city champions Liz-Anne Ogden and Bob Lewis are among the top Victoria entrants in the field of almost 100 players.

The event continues Friday night and all day Saturday. Semi-finals begin Saturday night at 7 and finals start Sunday at 1 p.m.

Braves Back on Top

Belmont Braves stung Mount View Hornets for 27 points in the first quarter then romped to a 77-47 victory in a key Victoria Senior High School Boys' Basketball League game Wednesday night at Belmont.

Victory vaulted the defending league champs back into first place, two points ahead of Oak Bay Bays, with two games remaining on their schedule.

Defeat left the Hornets in sixth place, two points back of three teams tied for the fourth and final playoff spot. They have just one game remaining to get back into the fray.

Jim Kupiak paced Belmont with 18 points and seven assists, and centre Lee Edmondson threw in 13 points and hauled down 13 rebounds. Jon Merz chipped in 11 points and out muscled his checks for 13 rebounds, adding to the Hornet problem, which had them behind by 22 points, 45-23, at half-time.

Kevin Gilbert had 11 points for Mount View.

Teams are idle tonight but the jockeying for positions continues at the weekend when league play concludes with several games.

Lansdowne Wins Bantam Playoff

Lansdowne Junior High School captured the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association bantam boys' playoff crown Wednesday with a 45-38 come-from-behind triumph over Gordon Head at Mount View High School.

Lansdowne, which finished with a 17-0 record during the regular season and an enviable 39-1 overall mark, was led by an 18-point performance by Doug Mosher.

Ben Shotton scored 17 points, including 13 in the crucial second half, for Lansdowne.

Rick Jones counted 18 points to pace Gordon Head, which had a 23-18 lead at the intermission.

Lansdowne now advances to the six-team Vancouver Island playoff March 3 and 4 at Cumberland, where the winner gains a berth in the B.C. final in Salmon Arm, March 17-18.

Flyers Earn Playoff Spot

Fuller Lake Flyers will join Victoria-Metro Toyota in the Vancouver Island midget hockey playoff final in Comox at the weekend.

Flyers nipped Saanich Braves 4-3 at Pearkes Arena to gain the other south-Island berth in the round-robin affair.

White Sox Must Expect Plenty

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"The Chicago club judges Richie Allen on what he does for us on the field," White Sox manager Chuck Tanner said after the Chisox dealt pitcher Tommy John and infielder Steve Huntz to Los Angeles Dodgers for the 29-year-old slugger.

The Chicago club must be expecting a lot.

Allen agreed Wednesday to a 1972 contract for more than $100,000, making him the highest-paid player in White Sox history.

Allen, who spent seven tempestuous seasons with Philadelphia Phillies, will be playing for his fourth club in four seasons. He hit 23 home runs and drove in 90 runs with the Dodgers in 1971.

While Allen was presumably content, a couple of other prominent American League sluggers were not—at least, not yet.

Harmon Killebrew is one of eight Minnesota Twins still unsigned, while Frank Howard is not expected in the Texas Rangers' training camp for "quite a while," says general manager Joe Burke.

Killebrew, 35, earned $110,000 last year and is expected to agree to a raise of about $10,000.

Inaugural Hoop Meet Lures Twelve Teams

Twelve teams in midget and junior divisions are slated to hit the boards in the inaugural all-Saanich junior high school boys and girls' basketball tournament Friday and Saturday at Claremont High School.

Four games are scheduled for Friday, starting at 5 p.m., and Saturday's slate of eight games is set to begin at 10 a.m.

Mt. Newton, North Saanich and Royal Oak are the schools taking part and admission charges are 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for students each day. Two-day passes are available for 75 cents.

Steelhead Regulations Spotlighted at Meeting

Improved steelhead regulations and environmental problems were the focal points of the second annual meeting of the Steelhead Society of B.C. earlier this month.

At the morning session a resolution presented by the Vancouver Island chapter calling for the preservation of the upper White River watershed received unanimous support. It also sparked an uproar of indignation at the lack of concern shown by the B.C. forest service, the government and the logging company for the unique fish, wildlife and recreational values of this last readily-accessible watershed on Vancouver Island. A cutting clause which allowed the harvesting of all merchantable timber along the riverbank was singled out for particular ire and resulted in a unanimously-approved policy resolution calling for a minimal fifty foot green strip of all growth to be left along all stream banks.

Regulation changes for steelhead anglers were numerous and precipitated many debates. Principal amonst these were resolutions calling for "a one fish per day limit on summer-run steelhead from June 1 through to August 31," and a 12-inch minimum size limit on all migratory rivers."

The resolution on summer-run steelhead, while restricting the angler's catch, met with unanimous approval. Various members pointed out that the summer-run steelhead is a very distinct race of steelhead. While its life history and physiology are almost identical to a winter fish its habits are very different. Moving into its parent stream in late spring and summer the summer-run steelhead will hold in one pool during its stay in the river making it very susceptible to angling pressure. Once an angler knows the pools in which the fish are holding it is an easy matter to fish that pool throughout the summer until all are caught. It has been found that even if hooked and lost, the same fish will take again the following day from the same pool and likely from the same holt it held before.

Members felt that blanket regulations which now prevail throughout the province applying equally to summer and winter fish must be changed and a regulation such as the above, which recognizes the two distinct races should be applied.

The 12-inch limit to be imposed on all migratory streams throughout the province applying equally to summer and winter fish must be changed and a regulation such as the above, which recognizes the two distinct races should be applied.

The 12-inch limit to be imposed on all migratory streams throughout the province is aimed at halting the killing of steelhead smolts. These juvenile steelhead are particularly vulnerable in the lower reaches of streams during the spring and summer when they are migrating to sea from their headwater nurseries.

Other regulatory resolutions which were adopted called for:

—A province-wide weekly bag limit of two fish per day with four only in possession during a week.

—Including a regulation making it unlawful to keep game fish other than when such fish are hooked in the mouth.

—That the angler catching a steelhead must make the proper entry on his punch card.

—That no person shall have in his possession any game fish caught by another person unless such a fish has with it a written statement clearly showing the name of the angler.

—That no person shall ship any game fish unless the shipment is clearly marked as such.

—A reduction in the catch limit to a two days' possession limit of four fish.

Particular concern was expressed by all members at the possibility of steelhead eggs being transplanted from one river system to produce steelhead in other systems already supporting wild stock. It was unanimously passed that hatchery reared steelhead be from brood stock taken from the same river in which they are to be released. It was felt that brood stock from another system would weaken the natural wild stock through cross-breeding.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Award winner for fifth successive year in Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition is Fran Woodruff, who has topped women's fivepin division in 18th week of ninth annual contest. Fran toppled pins for 293-327-270—890 series in Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome to win weekly award that qualifies her for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Jim Carter Leaves Cougars

"I won't say things can't get worse," Victoria Cougar coach Mitch Pechet said Wednesday night, "because they might."

Unexpectedly finding himself behind the bench following the resignation of Fred Huculak about two weeks ago, Pechet's Western Canada Hockey League adventure has burned out to be a continuing series of misfortune.

And no relief in sight.

The Cougars suffered two more jolts Wednesday in their final warmup for tonight's Memorial Arena meeting with the Medicine Hat Tigers (8 o'clock).

Victoria's lineup was reduced by another two.

Winger Jim Carter and defenceman Murray Kennett are the latest to fall into the missing-from-action category.

Carter, apparently annoyed after twice being informed that he wasn't playing his position properly, stormed out of practice. Quitting 15 minutes early Carter left with all his personal possessions, including skates and other hockey gear.

Carter's walkout seemed definite, but Pechet left his door open for a possible return.

"If he has second thoughts after a night's sleep, Jim knows where my office is and I'll be happy to discuss any problem he may have. But he has to return on my terms.

"We can't have everybody trying to run the hockey club."

ORDER FROM DOCTOR

Kennett, Cougars' captain and perhaps the steadiest player since Christmas, took his rest order from the team doctor. The only one to appear in all 51 Victoria games this season, Kennett has been sidelined by mononucleosis.

He will definitely misss tonight's game and a Saturday game here against Vancouver Nats, but may get clearance to accompany Cougars on a gruelling nine-game road trip which begins Sunday in Calgary.

"The worst may be over."

That leaves Pechet with only 14 regulars including standby goalie Rick Tkalcic.

Medicine Hat opened its final West Coast swing Wednesday by coming from behind to tie the Nats 4-4 in Vancouver. In the only other game played, Calgary Centennials scored a 4-2, home-ice decision over New Westminster Bruins.

Late Charge Trips Vikings

Manitoba Bisons dropped the roof on University of Victoria Vikings in the final 10 minutes Wednesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre and crushed UVic hopes of collecting at least one victory in the Western Intercollegiate Athletic Association hockey league season.

Bisons twice erased two-goal deficits and then scored three goals within a two-minute span midway through the final period and escaped with a 7-6 come-from-behind victory, handing the Viking their 19th straight loss in their final league game.

Bob McCallum, Dave Cousins, Graham Clarke and Pierre Bergman gave the Vikings a 4-2 edge after two periods before the Bisons struck for four straight goals in the third, and a 6-4 edge. Scott Munro narrowed the lead to one goal before the visitors scored again. Munro scored his second goal with less than three minutes remaining to round out the Viking scoring.

George Dufort, George Watson, Clayton Kemp, Jim Trosky, Greg Meikle and Al White scored for the Eastern Division Bisons.

Runners Move Up To Fourth

Boyd's boot lifted the Runners one point ahead of Mount View in the battle for the fourth and final playoff position.

Joe Whipple scored two trys as Oak Bay clipped Victoria High 21-0 and Claremont won by default over Esquimalt.

HIGHLIGHTS

OTTAWA (CP) — Highlights of the government's main spending estimates for the 1972-73 fiscal year starting April 1, presented to Parliament Wednesday:

Gross outlays total $18,809,080,169, up six-tenths of one per cent from $18,693,940,921 estimated now for 1971-72.

Ordinary departmental spending rises 3.8 per cent to $15,749,301,169 from $15,178,-260,405.

Emphasis put on regional economic expansion, environmental problems, Indian and Eskimo affairs, northern development and foreign aid.

Major increases in health and welfare outlays and interest on the public debt.

Defence budget increases $48 million to $1,939,634,000 due to higher pay and allowances while program and service cut.

Nearly $70.5 million earmarked for new Montreal airport near St. Scholastique, Que., $15.3 million for improvements Toronto airport at Malton, and $42.8 million for planning and site of additional Toronto airport.

Old age security payments increase to $2.27 billion from $2.21 billion.

Federal Works Plans Outlined

OTTAWA (CP) — A $13,752,000 major federal works program for the four western provinces for the 1972-73 fiscal year starting April 1 was outlined to the Commons Wednesday.

Another $3,150,000 is allocated for the Northwest Territories and $3,409,000 for the Yukon.

The new fiscal year's works spending by province: Manitoba $5,450,000; Saskatchewan $1,200,000; Alberta $2,200,00; British Columbia $4,902,000.

Projects of $250,000 or more by province: In some cases the actual amount to be spent in 1972-73 is less than $250,000 because the project will run into 1974.

Tax Reforms Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — Apart from the taxes you pay, Canada's new taxation system effective last Jan. 1 is already costing a bit of money.

The estimated costs of operating the revenue department's taxation division in 1972-73 is about 20 per cent higher than the current year and officials say this is largely due to the new system.

Tax Credit Approved

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has agreed that Ontario can start a tax credit system for property taxes in the 1972 taxation year, Treasurer Darcy McKeough announced Wednesday.

The tax credit to homeowners, those who rent and roomers and boarders, will replace Ontario's basic shelter tax rebate.

And the credits will be available to about one million people who formerly filed no tax returns because they had an income below the taxable level.

McKeough admitted that the Ontario treasury and revenue departments will have a major selling job to do to convince those one million poor it is to their advantage to file a tax claim.

FOOTBALL FOR BOYS

It's spring Canadian football for boys of 10 to 12 years.

Scheduled to open its first season at Willows school on March 5 is the four-team Oak Bay Invader Youth League. Play is slated to continue with Sunday games until about the end of April.

Boys wishing to play in the new league may obtain further information by calling 598-2766.

HALTER IN HARNESS

WINNIPEG (CP) — G. Sydney Halter, former Canadian Football League commissioner, has been named chairman of the Manitoba Horse Racing Commission.

People on the go

Today's people like to be out and going. And Maverick makes it easy to get where you want to go.

You can pick up your girlfriend and head off by yourselves in the snappy 2-door Maverick. This is a car easy on gas consumption and mighty easy to handle — Maverick can move around corners, and move out of traffic, with coltish ease.

Young families on the go can head out for a fun day on the slopes in the 4-door Maverick. Bundle the kids in, there's plenty of room for everyone.

And, if you want to swing a little, there's the Grabber. All dressed up for those on the go. A deck lid spoiler, dual racing mirrors, simulated hood scoops, road lamps, tape stripes, and an optional 3-speed floor shift teamed with a 200 CID Six or a 302 V-8.

Of course, the Grabber can be a bit of a put on. If you want the sporty looks without quite the muscle you can get the Grabber with a 250 CID Six with Select-Shift automatic transmission.

And all Mavericks have this in common: they let you kick up your heels. With a minimum of hassle. And a maximum of fun. In fact, Maverick is the car designed to be virtually trouble-free. No wonder Maverick is North America's favourite compact.

If you like to get a lot out of life, get a car with a lot going for it. Go Maverick. At your Ford Dealers today.

Fatal Collision Cancels Dayliner

Today's scheduled run of the E & N Railway's dayliners was cancelled following a fatal collision Wednesday afternoon involving the train and a car driven by a Duncan man.

Frances Kelin, 75, of Herd Road in Duncan, was killed when his car collided with the dayliner three miles north of Duncan.

Klein was alone in the vehicle. No injuries were reported by the train's crew or 12 passengers.

E & N spokesmen said it has not been determined how long the dayliner run will be out after today.

An inquest has been ordered into Klein's death.

$20,500 FOR MUSEUM

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley Forest Museum has been granted $20,500 through Canada Manpower's local initiative program to construct a repair and restoration shop.

The municipalities of Duncan, North Cowichan and the village of Lake Cowichan are supplying the building materials while the grant pays the wages of seven persons to erect the building. Lumber for the project is being supplied by area mills and construction companies.

Museum manager Pat Phillips said that with the restoration shop they will now be able to give the irreplacable and historically significant exhibits the work and attention they need.

"During the summer we are busy catering to people and during the winter we need a shop for repairs. Now we will have it," he said.

Search For Judge Called Off

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — RCMP Wednesday called off the search for Judge Anthony Robinson, 38, who disappeared last week while returning home to Kincolith, northeast of Prince Rupert, in his fishing boat.

Last Monday, he radioed from near Fort Simpson that his 35-foot boat was having mechanical trouble.

City Claims Staked

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Mayor Gordon Nicol has asked the provincial government for a legal opinion on the staking of mining claims within Kamloops' boundaries.

This came after it was learned three mining firms had staked more than 160 claims in a 700-acre area in the southwest corner of the city. Stakes marking the claims bear the names Sugarloaf, Carol and Gamona.

Strike Favored

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 900 civic inside workers Wednesday night voted 85 per cent in favor of strike action to back demands for a wage increase.

They want a 19.4-per-cent raise in a one-year contract.

Union official Ken Darby said "We can't do anything until the mediation officer submits his report and then we can serve 72-hour strike notice," Darby said.

'Burn Outhouses'

SOUTH FORT GEORGE (CP) — homeowners in this central British Columbia village still using outhouses have been given to May 31 to hook up to the sewer system.

Village council has ordered the volunteer fire department to destroy any outdoor privies remaining after the deadline.

Traffic Convoys

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The Yellowhead Highway between Prince Rupert and Terrace was reopened to convoyed traffic Wednesday after being blocked by deep snowslides since last week. Highway 16 was clogged for a nine-mile stretch between two points when a series of slides thundered down on to the road.

School Votes

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Ratepayers in North and West Vancouver vote March 16 on referendums for additional school operating funds totalling more than $1 million. North Vancouver is seeking $815,668.

West Vancouver board is $226,000 over the new ceiling and says it may have to lay off 50 teachers if the referendum is defeated.

Consumer Bureau

VANCOUVER (CP) — An information bureau for consumers opens here next week. The B.C. branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada will staff the office with volunteers who can advise consumers on various problems and who can tell consumers where to make complaints.

Suit Against Spa

VANCOUVER (CP) — A North Vancouver man, Robert Findlay, whose wife died last September at a health spa in North Vancouver, has launched legal action for damages in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Findlay's action is against Palm Springs Health Spa, the Spa and Beauty Resort Ltd., and Interplex Spa. He claims damages for the death of his 22-year-old wife, Shirley Ann, electrocuted Sept. 4 while using a foot vibrator.

Teamsters Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twelve members of the Teamsters Union went on strike Wednesday against David L. Jones Wholesale Florists Ltd. where the union is seeking a first contract. A union spokesman said the main issues were wages and the company's refusal to agree to a union shop.

Seek First Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thirty-five members of the Office and Technical Employees Union served strike notice Wednesday on Wire Rope Industries of Canada Ltd. after a unanimous vote among employees seeking a first contract. However, mediation in the dispute continues.

'Send a Bus to the Jones' Home'

"You can put a three-year-old on this service and he'll be delivered to the door."

The service is called Telebus — a new kind of public bus in Regina which consultant Charles Clapham says is saving money, driving people out of their cars and taking a nip out of those 50-below-zero prairie winters.

Clapham today described the system to city officials, downtown businessmen and local transit authorities.

The system sounds much like a taxi service which carries up to 20 passengers instead of only one. Half-size buses are used, making the service cheaper than a taxi, and slightly more expensive than regular route buses.

The telebuses are geared into a regular bus system, and have improved service to the less populated areas of suburban Regina. Regular bus fares are 25 cents for adults, and the telebus costs an extra dime.

The system has "introduced an element of personal service," Clapham said.

The driver can greet his passengers with a "Good morning, Mrs. Jones," because he knows exactly who each passenger is in advance.

Mrs. Jones, living on the edge of a suburban subdivision, can phone the central centre the evening before. At the appointed time a small bus arrives at her door — and waits a maximum of 30 seconds.

She pays 25 cents and transfers to a regular route bus waiting at a shopping centre midway downtown. On her way home, the system is reversed.

The system is enjoyed by women and children who otherwise might not chance long walks after dark, Clapham said. But it is also an improvement in most areas on the old ordinary route system through the suburbs used by persons travelling to work.

In one area, five regular routes have been reduced to two. The result is a saving in driver costs. A $25,000 saving was experienced in a year, and increased use of the public bus service as a whole brought in new revenue of $40,000.

Regina transit manager W. C. Atkinson estimates a total cost saving of about $120,000 this year.

Clapham said the success of Telebus is largely due to Atkinson, who has a flare for marketing the system.

He also said the Telebus is ideal for Regina which has extremely cold winters. A passenger waits in the warmth of his home until the bus is at the door.

The system is carrying 1,900 people on peak days, about 25 per cent of which used to drive cars.

Clapham made no guesses about the suitability to Victoria, but said it could be designed to serve any urban centre with low-density suburban areas.

. . . And Still Counting

A helping hand has been given to members of the Robert Sam family, whose home was destroyed by fire Sunday, by students of Craigflower Elementary. Shown here presenting a cheque for $115 to Denise Sam is Richard Chadwick, a Grade 7 student who personally collected $37 and some clothing for the family. A school spokesman said about $30 more was raised today. Other Sam girls in the picture are (left to right) Nancy, Roberta and Barbara. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

'Recreation Land' Sale Set In MB Real Estate Move

Huge tracts of land no longer suitable for logging will be subdivided and sold as real estate even though J. V. Clyne, chairman of MacMillan-Bloedel which owns the property, describes it as "primarily recreation land."

Clyne made the comment today following an announcement last week in the company magazine, MB, that the firm intends to go into the real estate business.

"It is primarily recreation land," Clyne said. He added that the land involved will be detailed publicly in April and includes some waterfront acreage.

The land has been purchased from the parent company by MacMillan Bloedel Properties Ltd., a newly-formed company. The acreage is scattered on the lower half of Vancouver Island, the Sechelt Peninsula and Powell River areas and the Gulf Islands, according to the magazine.

Douglas F. McCrimmon will be in charge of the new real estate operation, the magazine report said.

Although some residential and industrial parcels that do not need extensive servicing are available now, it will be some time before all the acreage will be ready for market, according to Robert Borrer, MB vice-chairman.

"We have just started," he said.

Clyne told the Times: "What I'm trying to do is to carefully accommodate ourselves to existing conditions and if logging these areas are going to create environmental discussion, I'd just as soon use them for something else."

He claimed that his company can now maintain all its operations in perpetuity with its existing allowable annual cut.

But lands the company is unable to use for forestry purposes — close to communities, for example, would be developed for real estate purposes, he added.

"Since these lands are taxed at a rate applied to forest operations rather than full real estate taxes, it would not be fair to keep them at a preferred rate," Clyne said.

More Pressure to Expand

Meanwhile, opponents of the plan contended that the decision would aggravate Vancouver Island's land-use problems and increase pressure for expansion of logging operations on public lands.

Ken G. Farquharson, of Vancouver, president of the Sierra Club of B.C., a conservationist group, said the company's move will invariably lead to other logging companies going into real estate.

He claimed MB's move would eventually remove considerable areas of land from sustained-yield forestry and so reduce the flow of fibre to the company's mills, leading to loss of jobs.

"Yet this is the same company that is vigorously opposing the withdrawal of public forest along the West Coast Lifesaving Trail to improve recreation in the Pacific Rim National Park," he said. "It's reason, a shortage of fibre leading to loss of jobs at the mills.

"Their decision backs up our contention that MB has put company profits ahead of the interests of the community in the Nitinat situation," he said.

"It also clearly demonstrates the pressures that will rise to expand logging in Crown forests as it becomes more profitable to turn private forest into subdivisions rather than operate it as a sustained-yield forest," he added.

Rick Careless, chairman of the Victoria Sierra, said: "Yet the same company when it comes to its own private timber lands operated under tree farm licences, is judge and jury on the question of whether it's best use is for real estate and recreation."

Careless pointed out that nearly the total length of the east coast of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands is privately owned.

Woman Reinstated By Welfare Office

A petite and determined 19-year-old French-Canadian woman has been given a reprieve by the Victoria welfare office in its attempts to send her back to Drummondville, Que.

Dianne Smith, who was cut off welfare and offered a train ticket back to Quebec earlier this week, was today reinstated on welfare until her appeal to the provincial department of rehabilitation is decided, Mrs. June Lieberherr, case advocate for the Community Action Group, said today.

Miss Smith, who has been looking for work since she came here in September, refused to pick up the train ticket and took her plight to the CAG.

Welfare director Alex Davidson had said the woman has no chance to find work here because of language difficulties.

Miss Smith, a seamstress, who knew no English when she came, is taking an English course with Camosun College and and spoke to reporters in English on Tuesday.

SMITH

Mrs. Lieberherr said Davidson has cancelled the railway ticket and will give Miss Smith a $20 food voucher and two more weeks' rent.

Davidson said the decision to cut the girl off had come from the rehabilitation department. Its minister, Phil Gaglardi, who will not allow anyone in the department but himself to talk to the press, has been unavailable since Tuesday for comment on what basis decisions to persuade persons to leave the province are made.

Mrs. Lieberherr said a similar reprieve has also been gained for Mike Harwood, 33, a former insurance salesman, who came here three months ago from Toronto with his wife and two children.

Harwood supported his family on savings for 2½ months while he looked for construction work here. And when he applied for welfare he was offered transportation money to return to Toronto.

He will now be supported until an appeal is heard, Mrs. Lieberherr said.

Mrs. Susan Talbot, president of the CAG, said the provincial government's intimidation of such welfare recipients contravenes the Canada Assistance Act and infringes upon a person's basic right to freedom of movement within the country.

BOARD TO PROBE HOTEL DISMISSALS

The registrar of the B.C. Labor Relations Board confirmed today the board will examine a recent labor dispute at the Sidney Hotel.

Workers at the hotel charged earlier this week that about 20 of them were fired because they intend joining a union. Since then a number have been rehired.

"We have received a complaint and it is going to be investigated," registrar G. H. O'Neill said today.

The Labor Relations Act prohibits employers from dismissing employees because they want to join or continue in a union.

Day Care Unit Ready To Ease the Pressure

A $375,000 addition to Queen Victoria (St. Joseph's) Hospital to handle minor surgery will be officially opened Friday and accept its first patients 10 days later.

The ambulatory care or day care unit as it is called will serve patients whose surgery or treatment does not require them to stay overnight.

With two operating rooms and 18 beds for surgery patients, it can handle up to 5,300 cases a year. The treatment section, for procedures which don't require an anaesthetic, can care for up to 7,000 cases annually.

The addition is a one-storey structure alongside the hospital's emergency department. Construction started last Aug. 3. The $290,000 for the building and $85,000 for equipment came from the provincial government, the Capital regional hospital district and a $67,000 grant from the Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Woodward Foundation.

The treatment section of the unit has cubicles for five patients and two treatment rooms. There is also a laboratory and a room for putting on or changing casts which can handle two patients at a time.

Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, the hospital's executive director, said today the unit will relieve long-standing pressure in three areas.

The emergency department will be freed from a number of treatment functions to concentrate on real emergency cases, which are increasing at the rate of 8 per cent a year.

Eight beds in the hospital which had been used for same-day surgery cases will now be available for acute cases.

The problem of processing patients in the emergency department and then moving them to the fifth floor operating rooms for minor surgery, together with the crowding this created in the recovery room, will be eased.

"Having all these facilities in one unit will be much more efficient."

The trend toward handling surgery cases without an overnight stay in hospital stems from two factors, the shortages of beds and improved anaesthetics, he said.

Patients having minor surgery now get anaesthetics which don't generally make them sick so they are able to go home sooner.

Most of the patients will be in the unit only five or six hours. Coffee and cookies will be available for them in the latter stages of recovery.

The opening of the unit will mean an addition of about 10 to the hospital staff, most of them registered nurses. While the rest of the hospital operates round the clock, the day care unit will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

$10,000 Wallace Scholarship Biggest of Five New Awards

The University of Victoria has established five new scholarships and bursary funds totalling $30,000.

The largest is more than $10,000, set up in the name of Robert T. Wallace, former UVic president. Income from the fund will go to a deserving student in third year honors.

Four other funds, each of $5,000, will provide scholarships and bursaries for students in specific areas of study.

The Dr. Douglas H. Taylor Lee memorial fund, set up by Dr. Anathalie W. Lee in memory of her husband, will provide a scholarship for a second or third year student planning medical studies. A pre-med student will also benefit from the Lucy and Margaret Corbet scholarship fund, set up from the estate of Margaret Corbet, 1725 Beach Drive.

Faculty of education students will be eligible for two new bursaries.

The G. Clifford Carl bursary fund will provide a $300 annual bursary to a third or fourth year student specializing in biological studies.

Another $300 bursary will go to a "deserving and promising" student with at least a second class average from the Cearnhue bursary fund, which has been increased to $1,000. It is named after I. M. Cearnhue and Judge J. B. Cearnhue.

Meeting Called to Save Home

A meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 8, at the University of Victoria for citizens who want to save the old Wilson home at Courtney and Blanshard.

The meeting, which will be held in the lounge of the Student Union Building, has been called by Caroline Smyly, former curator of history at the Provincial Museum.

She originally planned to hold the meeting in her home but she said the response was so great that larger quarters had to be found.

Mrs. Smyly has suggested that the house, the last historic home in downtown Victoria, be purchased and preserved by the city.

Opposed to turning the house into a museum, Mrs. Smyly has also advocated that the city persuade Wilson to preserve the house and include it in his proposed $4.5 million 15-storey apartment-office complex.

Where Have All Those Stations Gone?

MUCH AS I HATE TO admit it, there are times when a picture does actually speak louder than words. Last week, we ran a Bill Halkett story that brought responses from Seattle, Campbell River and numerous points between.

Bill's picture showed a young semi-spaniel taking its elderly Pekingese house companion for an airing in a little red wagon. The sight was a familiar one to Bromley Place neighbors of Harry and Esme Windle, whose pets these poodles were.

As for the Windles, they found nothing extraordinary in the daily jaunt. Year-old Tammy didn't object to his spell in harness, Vodka the Peke, allowed by extreme age, obviously enjoyed the ride.

"We never expected the reaction that picture produced," says Mrs. Windle. "Even before our paper was delivered, the phone began to ring.

"Everyone who called said pretty much the same thing — that the picture of our dogs had given them something to laugh over in a troubled world."

Mrs. Windle, a gallant lady who makes the best of the worst, is glad the picture brought pleasure to so many.

It means a lot to her and her husband, too, for a reason which they feel you should know.

One evening early this week, Vodka rose laboriously from her favorite place on the rug, and demanded to be picked up. Minutes later, at the venerable age of 17, she died peacefully in her mistress's arms.

"We miss her," says Esme Windle. "But she had a very long, good life, and we have that picture to help keep her in memory."

Recent CPR claims that promotion and improved service have brought no appreciable increase in Esquimalt and Nanaimo-Daylner traffic fetch a response from a United Transportation Union spokesman.

J. C. Mason, chairman of UTU Local 186, writes from Nanaimo to suggest that "while in essence these claims are most probably truths, what is left unannounced completely nullifies any of the improvements so made."

Mason points out that in August, 1969, when arguments for and against a CPR bid to discontinue the passenger service were heard by transport commissioners at Victoria, 43 stations were listed between this city and the end-of-steel at Courtenay.

"As fares can only be sold between stations listed," Mason goes on, "there were these 43 places fares could be charged to or from. On June 1, 1971, a new tariff covering E and N fares was issued, increasing them by 10 per cent, and reducing the number of stations to 27 . . . again, on Feb. 15, 1972, another new tariff came into effect showing a further increase in general fares and a reduction in listed stations to 17."

His contentions:

That people in rural areas going to and from the cities face the prospect of double or triple fares because of the station closure.

That if the company feels those stations must be deleted, it should allow conductor and ticket agents to charge fares on a mileage basis.

Mason urges public protest against actions which he sees as attempts to get around the CTC ruling which retained a rail passenger service for Vancouver Island.

"If these station deletions go unchecked," he warns, "it will only take a few more months to wipe out most of the remaining 17."

I hope the UTU chairman is wrong there. But he could be right, and with this in mind, I add a warning of my own for those who would have any rail line remain in passenger biz;

Use it, or lose it.

It happens that one of this department's scouts got tired of waiting at a downtown stop for a Gordon Head bus on Wednesday morning.

So when a University bus happened along, she boarded it and in due time alighted outside UVic's Student Union Building.

She was shortcutting her way to Finnerty Road when through the Sub windows, she glimpsed a sight that halted her in her tracks. Everywhere, it seemed, were white-sheeted cots with bodies sprawled upon them.

"For a moment," says she, "I was convinced there'd been a bombing or something. The place looked like a disaster area."

But only for a moment. First shock over, she spotted a Red Cross truck and a sign that made all plain. It read, "Blood Donors."

South Park Makes Hot Lunch Another Community Affair

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

Give a child 50 cents for lunch and chances are he'll head straight for the nearest "greasy spoon" for a hamburger and bottle of pop.

To get youngsters away from bad eating habtis, South Park Elementary School has embarked on a hot lunch program.

One hundred and sixty-four lunches were served Wednesday at a cost of 60 cents each.

Organizers of the program, principal David Allan and public nurse Mrs. Jess Bridges, hope the lunches will eventually be served twice a week.

Many of the children are not getting a good meal in the middle of the day, said Mrs. Bridges. They can't have lunch at home because they either live too far away or their mother works.

A nutritional lunch will provide children with more energy for learning than does potato chips and chocolate bars, she added.

Another purpose of the noon feed is to bring people together. It is part of Allan's plan to convert schools from domains of the young to community affairs involving people of all ages.

Parents and local residents are invited to attend, Allan said.

Wednesday's menu consisted of fried chicken, potatoes, peas, coconut cream pudding, a bun with butter, and milk or coffee. The meal was cooked by Goodwill Enterprises, which is also involved in the Meals for Wheels project which serves elederly shutins, and transported by the Community Council.

Lunch was a family affair for the Whytes. Usually noon time doesn't find them sitting at the same table. Penny, 10, usually has a lunch at school because she lives so far away. And her father, Ed, usually grabs a quick hamburger during his noon break.

Mrs. Whyte hopes the lunches will continue on a permanent basis because it would mean that not only Penny, but her husband, would have a proper meal.

Victor and Simone Poupart also shared the food and time with their three children, Paul, 13, Cathy 12, and Allan, 9. Although Mrs. Poupart prepares a hot lunch for her children every day at home, she thinks the lunch is a good idea. It cuts down on cooking and washing dishes, she said.

"It also gives us a chance to get out and meet the children's classmates and teachers," she added.

Allan hopes the program will expand to other Victoria schools and involve more community groups.

If enough funds were raised to purchase second-hand restaurant equipment, cooking facilities, could be set up in the school, he said.

Tennis 'Pro' Fights Stigma of Abortion

WASHINGTON (WP) — "I feel strongly about abortions," said pro tennis star Billie Jean King. "Women should have a choice, that's all. Like having a career or being a housewife, the choice is there for you. I feel strongly about it."

Mrs. King had an abortion early in 1971, the start of her greatest year in tennis, the year in which she won a fantastic 19 tournaments and became the first woman athlete to earn more than $100,000 prize money in a year.

"If every woman who had an abortion would come out and say so, then it wouldn't be such a social stigma," Mrs. King said.

Mrs. King's abortion was a closely guarded secret at the time. She missed only one tournament. In the next Virginia Slims tour event, Mrs. King defaulted during a semifinal match, in her first encounter against teen-age sensation Chris Evert, because of what was described at the time as "illness." Mrs. King now says she had "cramps."

Signed Ms. Advertisement

The abortion came to light recently when Mrs. King was one of 53 prominent American women who signed an advertisement in the first issue of Ms, the magazine edited by Gloria Steinem, that they had undergone an abortion and that they favored repeal of all anti-abortion laws.

'Whoever has to have the baby is the one who should make the decision," Mrs. King noted.

The 28-year-old Californian also wonders about the mentality of the people who make the laws. For instance, she cites an example in New York:

"A 15- or 16-year-old girl is allowed to have an abortion, but not to have contraceptives. Can you believe that? It's like putting the cart before horse."

Mrs. King also wants to make one thing clear: She is not a raving maniac for women's lib. She does not carry banners or posters. Nor does she demonstrate. One of the nation's most outspoken athletes, Mrs. King would rather talk about her tennis accomplishments.

"Women's lib means different things to each woman," Mrs. King said. "To me, it means equality, having an equal choice."

What Equality Means

For the player who is seeded No. 1 in the Virginia Slims of Washington Tournament, which started here Wednesday, equality means being treated the same as Rod Laver, the world's best tennis player.

"I won 19 tournaments last year. I was the first woman to win $100,000. Time magazine calls and wants to talk about women's lib. I wish they could say, 'we want to talk to you as an athlete.'

"Rod Laver. When he won the grand slam they wrote about him as a tennis player. The only way I get into things is because of my connection with women's lib. I run just as many laps as he does. I train just as hard. women's lib should be secondary. The only way I get into the news now is that I beat Chrissie or she beat me, or I play (Evonne) Gollagong."

For the record, Mrs. King has won the all-England championships at Wimbledon three times and the U.S. championship at Forest Hills twice. Last year her record was 34-8 against the other women ranked among the world's top 10, after coming back from her second knee operation.

She won five straight Virginia Slims tournaments at one stage. By comparison, Laver set a world championship tennis record on Sunday by winning his third WCT event in a row.

Mrs. King's $117,000 earnings put her No. 1 in prize money among all American tennis players, men and women.

Yet, the public and media usually recognize Mrs. King only as a militant in tennis and politics.

Prior to open tennis, when the game was called "amateur tennis" and pros such as Mrs. King took money under the table, she strongly advocated abolishing such hypocrisy. Her stand almost resulted in the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association (ULTA) suspending her in 1967.

Mrs. King speaks frankly. After reaching the $100.000 level last year, she received a phone call from President Nixon. The president spoke and she listened. Finally there was a lull and she asked: "Are you through?"

Afterward, she was asked if she was nervous during the call. "Naw, not at all," she replied. "I've met him before. Besides this sort of stuff doesn't excite me. I get charged up when I get on a tennis court."

Game Downhill

There are now critics who say Mrs. King's game is going downhill. She lost to Miss Evert in the final at Fort Lauderdale three weeks ago and to Betty Stove in the quarterfinals last week at Oklahoma City.

"I can't stand to keep losing. I can't take it," said Mrs. King, whose promotional activities for a clothing manufacturer and for the women's pro tennis tour have limited her to two practice sessions this year.

"In my position I can't make excuses. I know why I'm losing. I'm out of shape . . . after Laver had three bad months last year, they couldn't wait to tear him down. I know what he was going through.

"I get tired thinking about last year. I'm still recovering from it," added Mrs. King who, unlike Laver, has not found the time to take a two-month vacation.

Closeness of Twins

DEAR ABBY: This is for the identical twin who said she did not enjoy being a twin, and didn't believe twins had any special "closeness" between them:

You are dead wrong! I've been a twin for 52 years, and we still think and feel alike. When she had a back operation, my back actually ached. When I was laid up after an auto accident, she said she felt my pain.

She bought a fur coat in New York. I bought the identical fur coat in San Francisco! (Neither one knew the other was even considering a fur coat!)

She sent me an ash tray for an anniversary. I had just bought one for myself exactly like it.

It's almost weird the way we think and feel alike, but it's the truth. Please sign me . . . Great To Be a Twin

DEAR GREAT: No identical twin would doubt you. At least, not this one.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Party Script No Fun

JELLY SIDE DOWN

nancy stahl

"We'll never be late for a dinner party again," I announced smugly, waving a sheet of paper. "I worked out the perfect system for next Friday night.

"Between 5:30 and 6:00," I read aloud, "Person A feeds the children while Person B takes his bath."

"Fin dibs on being Person B," my husband interrupted.

"At 6:00, Person A bathes, while Person B cleans up the kitchen."

"But Person B is all pink and shining from his 5:30 bath. He doesn't much go for the idea of mucking about in bits of sticky gravy."

"Okay, then," I said, "be Person A."

"But you'll use all the hot water at 5:30. Person A will have nothing left but two inches of lukewarm ick."

"I didn't promise Person A a rose garden," I reminded him. "At 6:30, Person A shaves, while Person B dresses. At 6:45, Person A relinquishes the bathroom to Person B and begins dressing. At 7:00, the sitter arrives, and we leave."

At 5:30 the following Friday, curtain time arrived, but my husband didn't appear until 5:45.

"You missed your cue," I said accusingly.

"What I missed was my bus. I'll deduct fifteen minutes from my bath time."

I had just settled into the tub when Person A began frantically hammering on the door.

"The children's TV dinners fell on the floor, and the dog ate them before I could scrape them back into the foil."

"Scramble some eggs," I yelled. "The frying pan is in the dishwasher." With corned beef hash stuck to the bottom, I added under my breath.

By 6:15 Person A was gloomily squatting in two inches of lukewarm ick, while I was scouring out a frying pan with corned beef hash and scrambled eggs cemented to the bottom. Six-thirty found us both dressing.

Even though we arrived at the dinner party only ten minutes late, I think I'll throw away the script. Everything went so smoothly that it took away all the fun.

Gerald Guest, organizer of new family life program in Saanich

Plan to Improve Family Ties

By PAT MUNSON
Times Correspondent

The role of a parent in today's society is a tough one, says Gerald Guest. Saanich school district special counsellor and organizer of a new family life program.

But, adds Guest, many parents punish themselves and their children by assuming all responsibility for a youngster's problems. They should, instead, assist him in working them out himself.

Communication within families is the biggest challenge facing the Saanich counsellor in his daily work, and it's the one which takes the longest to overcome.

"Parents almost panic about their roles today, much more so than when I started teaching in the 1950s" says Guest.

Concepts of child-raising which date from the Victorian era can no longer be applied: "Parents and schools are being 'fired' by students because they try to assume complete responsibility," explained Guest.

Parent Consultants

Instead, the parents and teachers should act as consultants, supportive and understanding, but detached.

It is important to share honest feelings with today's children who quickly detect hypocracy. If, for instance, a father explains just why he does not wish his daughter to hitchhike, she will be less resentful than if she receives a flat command.

"Who does the problem belong to?" asks Guest. "Remember, your children are from you but not of you. All that you as a parent, can do is to prepare them for life by encouraging responsible independence."

A great many parents will utter a frustrated groan at this statement. What does one do about such things as the Pill and drugs, the early sophistication wrought by global communication, and the fact that kids today live in a post-scarcity environment?

Gerald Guest has no pat answers, but he does provide guidelines in his capacity as counsellor to students, teachers and parents.

Under his direction, Saanich schools are developing a program of family life instruction which will eventually include all grades and in which, he hopes, parents will become involved.

To start with, explains Guest, many potential problems can be avoided by helping the individual to develop confidence and resilience early. For teachers, this means Grade 1.

The "self-concept" theory is aimed at awakening a child's awareness of his own self and of his relations to others and by providing opportunities for the child to succeed, results in a positive growth of self-confidence.

As an example of this theory, Guest described a story-telling session in the primary grades during which the teacher invites individual reactions and comment.

The child who achieves the courage to express himself is instantly rewarded by teacher approval. Support from his companions and the realization that others share some of the same fears and joys provides the child with confidence and the ability to meet larger challenges.

It is important to supply at every age opportunities in which the child or teenager can succeed, stresses the counsellor.

Parents today are often shocked by the emphasis on shared feelings and consequently project a negative attitude which, according to the counsellor, is much easier than sharing a positive feeling.

Changing values in the today's complex society often make parents feel helpless: "We have to change ourselves and this gets harder as we get older," admits Guest.

The double standard, "do as I say, not as I do" is another reason kids subconsciously "fire" their parents.

Instead, supportive advice, a readiness to help the individual pick himself up off the ground in times of trouble, and a frank assessment of the reasons for failure will help keep channels of communication open, and preserve the parent's role as consultant, says the counsellor.

Become Involved

Guest hopes parents who, he says, feel threatened if they are kept in the dark, will become involved in the new family life program.

"In a positive way, not after Charlie is in trouble," he added.

Saanich teachers are now taking in-service training to assist them in developing the program on a voluntary basis, meeting with public health and mental health lecturers in an effort to get away from the traditional bland, medical approach to sex education.

'Some question whether our schools should even be concerned with this subject," says Guest. "But teachers are frequently asked for help."

A teacher trained in the family life program has no set period for the subject but seizes "teachable moments" as they occur in spontaneous discussion.

"In this way, we can provide information through the school that is sound and accurate, always recognizing the limit of our own expertise," says Guest.

New U.S. Treasurer Works 12-Hour Day Answering Letters

WASHINGTON (UI) — Ramona Banuelos was told that her prime responsibility as treasurer of the United States would be to sign the country's currency.

"I was brought in under false pretenses," she said after holding the position for 30 days.

The position of treasurer, held by a woman since the administration of Harry S. Truman, generally has been considered a sinecure, with politics an important factor in selecting the nominee.

Much Work

Not so, Mrs. Banuelos said. "In reality, there is so much work that I'm at the office more than 12 hours a day," she said.

For example, she wound up with a letter by a constituent to his congressman, asking about the status of his attempt to buy a new Eisenhower silver dollar, for which he sent the treasury $6 and about which he has heard nothing.

Another congressman relayed a complaint of a tax refund which he said was seven months overdue.

"I have to check these things, find out what happened," Mrs. Banuelos said.

She said the mail sent to her office adds up to a heavy work load.

"I found 500 letters waiting to be answered when I moved in, 30 per cent of them written in Spanish," she said. "People in South America and Mexico wrote they were proud of someone with a Spanish background holding a position like this."

Other such letters come from Spanish communities in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Colorado, Oregon and Nevada, as well as Chicago, she said.

Mrs. Banuelos replies to those letters are dictated in Spanish.

Sign Currency

Currency in circulation now bears the signature of the late treasurer, Dorothy Andrews Kabis, who died last year. Mrs. Banuelos expects her own signature to appear on paper currency in early April and she is glad the name will be that of a woman.

"The treasurer should be a woman," she said. "This is a tradition that should be followed. Also, I think women are good administrators by nature.

"If they appoint a professional woman to the position, she can help improve things, and there's always room for this."

Well Prepared

On such a basis, Mrs. Banuelos, 47, is well prepared to be treasurer. Born in Miami, Ariz., March 20, 1925, the daughter of Juan Francisco and Teresa Lugo Acosta, she is founder of Ramona's Mexican Food Products Inc., the largest independent Mexican food processing plant in California.

She launched the enterprise in 1949 with an investment of $400. Under her management, the firm now brings in more than $5 million a year. In 1969, an employee profit-sharing plan was established, funded by the corporation. Shortly before her confirmation, however, she denied charges that illegal aliens were working there.

She was one of the founding directors of the Pan American National Bank of East Los Angeles, an undertaking launched in 1964 to serve the Mexican-American community and which now, under her board chairmanship, has resources of more than $22 million.

She is the mother of two sons, Martin A. and Carlos A. Torres, both active in the food processing firm. She and her husband, Alejandro, president of the company, have established three annual college scholarships for high school students of Mexican descent from needy areas of Los Angeles.

Consumer Man Needs Aid

Provincial Consumer Affairs Officer Michael Hanson needs help.

In a report tabled in the legislature Wednesday, Hanson says extra duties placed on him, including chairmanship of the provincial hearing aid board, have prevented him from keeping up with consumer complaints.

Complaints received rose from 643 in 1970 to 741 in 1971, he said, but cases left uncompleted at year end rose from 24 to 284.

Hanson's report said he has asked for extra staff in another report, which wasn't tabled in the legislature. Hanson operates the consumer affairs office with only secretarial help. He was appointed chairman of the new provincial hearing aid board last year.

The report says money refunded to consumers as a result of his action was $23,911 in 1971 compared with $32,234 in 1970.

Substantial increases in complaints were shown in the doorstep selling and mail order category which went from 70 in 1970 to 108 in 1971 and in motor trade which went from 164 to 191.

Magazine sales and record clubs were the main problem in the doorstep sales and mail order area, the report said. Motor trade complaints included 90 about used cars, 50 about new cars and 49 for repairs.

No Divorce

Peace, Quiet Hard Work

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto the good is becoming Toronto the loud, a University of Toronto professor said this week.

Dr. Donald Allen of the university's mechancial engineering department told the Toronto Sheet Metal and Air Handling Group that the city's noise level doubles every three years.

He said constant exposure to noise can produce high blood pressure, dilated blood vessels in the brain, dilation of the pupils and insomnia.

Citizens could protect themselves by closing their windows, lining their walls with lead, turning down their radios, wearing earplugs and staying away from airplanes, discotheques and busy downtown intersections.

MS Patients Bridge Gap Between Theory and Practice

EDMONTON (CP) — About 30 patients with multiple sclerosis are taking part in a controlled clinical trial at University Hospital as doctors evaluate an experimental treatment that some day may be useful as a treatment for this chronic crippling disease.

Dr. Alex McPherson stressed that it is not a cure for the disease, or even a major breakthrough in research.

But he doesn't deny that he and his associate, Dr. Peter Seland, have found improvement in some of the patients under his care.

"It's just that it's too early to be able to tell if we're on the right track."

Dr. McPherson, acting head of the department of immunology at the University of Alberta, works both in the area of basic immunology, completely in the laboratory, and in clinical research, with patients on the wards.

"All of us working in immunology at the University of Alberta are attempting to form a bridge between basic experimental research and the clinical application of research," he said in an interview.

Drs. McPherson and Seland are experimenting with a basic protein molecule that is isolated from brain tissue from cadavers.

Either the whole molecule or a specific group of nine amino acids from it will cause a clinical disease with a reaction in the brain and spinal cord of guinea pigs which closely resembles that seen in humans with multiple sclerosis.

MS, as it is usually called, is a disease that affects the nervous system causing little, thick plaques or patches to form. These plaques are scarred nerve tissue and result in the neurological complaints, such as loss of sensation, weakness and lack of coordination in arms and legs.

It is not known what causes MS, but Dr. McPherson said it appears the patches may be the result of an immune reaction in the affected tissues — a reaction of the nerve tissue to some foreign substance that has entered the body at some time.

The immune reaction that the doctors can cause in guinea pigs by injecting the protein molecule or the nine specific amino acids is similar. It is called experimental allergic encephalomyelitis, or EAE.

This preliminary fact-finding work in the experimental disease has gone on in many centres like the University of Alberta, Dr. McPherson said. Each group now is trying to find additional information that might provide another clue to the mystery of MS and its treatment.

Drs. McPherson and Seland and their team of specialists are trying to find out if a particular group of amino acids from the remaining 161 in the molecule will prevent the group of nine or the whole molecule from causing the disease in the guinea pigs.

"We have found that a portion of the molecule, if injected into the guinea pigs before they are exposed to the EAE factors, will prevent certain aspects of the disease. However, so far, the inhibitory portion hasn't worked if it is injected after the guinea pig has the disease."

Forecast for Friday, Feb. 25, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Steer clear of legal complications. Question of property ownership could arise. Old agreements may be broken. Trust your own hunch. Taking word of too many people now can be risky — and costly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Surprise due in area associated with employment, basic needs. Stress alternatives. Be flexible. Don't be in too much of a hurry. Give ideas time to develop. Mature approach now is a requisite. Act accordingly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What you desire may be at a distance. There will be quick changes. Don't waste money. Size up situation. Take inventory. If observant, you find what is needed. Be aware of details. Thorough approach is necessary.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Family member deserves change of scenery. Accent is on building a more solid relationship. Communicate. Express feelings. Don't permit home area to become battleground. Review property rights.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Ideas are plentiful. Key now is to be selective. Relative or neighbor will cooperate. But you must give in order to receive. Message will become increasingly clear. Obtain valid hint from Cancer message.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Protect valuables. Some persons now covet what you possess. See situation in realistic light. Don't take unnecessary risks with capital. Friend with unorthodox idea can aid in solving dilemma.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get chance to capitalize on unusual situation. Halfway measures will not suffice. Know this; act accordingly. Accent is on presenting new format. In personal life be ready for sudden changes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You gain access to confidential material. Use it intelligently. Make future plans involving travel, writing, publishing. Best now to complete projects rather than to start something new. You will understand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Strive to make your own imprint. Following others now would not be beneficial. Unusual alliances are formed. Don't fear the unorthodox. Be willing to experiment. If inventive, definite gain results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are given choice. Two offers occur simultaneously. Key is to be receptive. Avoid display of temperament. Questions concerning marriage are paramount. Cancer individual plays prominent role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can take solid steps toward making a bright future. Open new horizons. There are no real limitations — except those which are self-imposed. Accept social invitation. It could lead to important contact.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You face test. It is not as difficult as might first be imagined. Key is to do first things first. This includes keeping promises to loved ones, including children. Get some investment counseling.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, serious. Few persons know the real you — the one who is spiritual, sensitive to plight of underdog. This year will find you tackling new projects, becoming more independent — and happier. July could be most significant month of 1972.

S.T.O.P. in Fiscal Trouble

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal anti-pollution group called S.T.O.P., for Society to Overcome Pollution, has built up a remarkable list of achievements in its first two years. Now it is in financial trouble and is appealing to the public for help.

The 4,000-member group whose main source of revenue is its individual $2 membership fees has launched a fund-raising drive for $25,000.

Sheila Shulman, quiet-spoken S.T.O.P. president, says the society "has nothing left in the bank" and will be forced to curtail its operations unless it receives financial help.

The society, which has been called everything from "a group of do-gooder housewives" to "a bunch of Communists," was formed in January, 1970.

"People who don't know S.T.O.P. tend to regard us as radicals," Mrs. Shulman says. "Some people with whom we must deal, particularly business executives, are very defensive and suspicious. Otherwise, we are well received in the community at large."

TESTED DETERGENTS

A member's kitchen was turned into a laboratory for scientific testing of every laundry detergent on the market. Consumers were supplied with accurate information about the phosphate content in various detergents.

The federal government has since limited the amount of phosphate to a maximum of 20 per cent in laundry detergents sold in Canada.

Encouraged by the success of the detergent project and a rapidly expanding membership, S.T.O.P. proceeded to enlarge the scope of its interest and activities.

It now has 22 chapters in Montreal as well as 24 school groups. It also has members in Ontario. New Brunswick group is being organized in and the United States and a Quebec City.

S.T.O.P. has an energetic research committee of 26, headed by Carol Farkas, one of the society's co-founders, and includes scientists and engineers investigating a variety of environmental problems.

The committee has produced information guides for shopping, laundering, food preparation and gardening.

CLAIMS RESULTS

It has produced scientific reports on detergent substitutes, solid waste disposal, water fluoridation, antibiotics in animal feed, sewage treatment and air pollution control in the Montreal area, responsible use of fertilizers, mercury in the environment and insect poison strips in the home.

It is investigating colored dyes in paper products, low-sulphur fuels, pesticides and alternatives, disposable diapers, nitrates in food and trace metals in drinking water.

Mrs. Shulman says she feeels that the organization's persistence has been a factor in getting action on the sewage treatment issue, the setting up of federal and provincial environment departments and the enlargement of the Montreal Urban Community's air purification department.

"While some people may regard us as a pain," she says, "we have nevertheless demonstrated the potential within a community when it is motivated and organized effectively to deal with common concerns. Our large and complex society can be moved and affected by citizen action."

Cabinet Authorizes Suits Against Crown

The provincial government Wednesday granted permission for two court cases to be brought against it.

The decision marks only the second and third times the government has allowed the Crown to be sued since Social Credit took power in 1952.

The decision was made by the cabinet at a meeting Tuesday and was released Wednesday. Coincidentally, the issue was raised in the legislature Tuesday by Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) who voiced a common opposition complaint that the government is being undemocratic in denying the public the right to sue it.

The first case will be brought by Letita Tom of Fremont, California, who was injured when the B.C. Ferry Powell River Queen collided with dock pilings last June.

She is seeking payment of $461.80 in damages for medical and sundry expenses incurred because of the crash.

The second case arises from Lucaya Development Corporation of Vancouver.

The company says the public works department caused it to have to pay $1,337.82 for unauthorized construction work in November, 1969.

Assassination Fails

PARIS (UPI) — Col. Paul-Emile de Souza, the Dahomey army chief of staff, was slightly injured in an assassination attempt Wednesday. French radio stations reported from the African country. According to the broadcasts one of the attackers was killed and another wounded.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

David M. Woodliffe, 19, of no fixed address, was sentenced to four months definite and eight months indeterminate when he appeared in provincial court Wednesday on a number of charges involving theft and fraud.

Woodliffe was accused of breaking, entering and theft, forgery, uttering forged documents, and obtaining food and lodgings by fraud. The offences occurred during a three-week period starting Jan. 21 in Victoria.

Judge William Ostler considered a pre-sentence report on Woodliffe, and recommended that the jail term be served at the Boulder Bay forestry program of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Institute.

"I find I am saying something I have to say often ... that you are the victim of the broken home syndrome aggravated by drugs," Ostler told the accused.

"I am most sympathetic, but the answer hopefully will be to remove you from the environment and friends that have led to this trouble ... otherwise, it is going to ruin and perhaps kill you."

More Employers Eligible In Training Plan Change

A significant change in the federal government's $50 million on-the-job training program will open the scheme to many more employers, a Canada Manpower official said today.

George Bevis, Victoria Canada Manpower manager and district co-ordinator for special employment programs, said the minimum training time under the program has been cut from 13 weeks to six.

"This will allow employers to put in applications to train people at a lower skill level," he said.

With the previous minimum time set at 13 weeks a proposal to train a general sales clerk would not qualify because the training period was longer than required.

Bevis said the range is not extended to allow for training personnel for jobs in the logging, sawmill and pulp and paper industries, as well as other occupations such as service station attendants and sales clerks.

The maximum training time under the program, which refunds employers 75 per cent of wages, remains at 52 weeks. But Bevis said as trainees must be on the job before March 31 "there is need for some haste" in applying.

Basic criteria for the program include stipulations that those employed must come from the ranks of the unemployed or "underemployed," and that a new job must be created to meet the employer's expanding needs.

SISTERS GET GRANT

The two latest Victoria projects to gain federal funds under the local initiatives program were announced today by Victoria MP David Groos.

The Sisters of St. Ann, 2494 Arbutus Road, have been allocated $13,048 to employ seven persons on a program of remedical teaching and clean-up of grounds.

A $21,060 project submitted by the Handyman Group for Help to Senior Citizens, 92, Pandora, has also been approved.

The program, employing 10 persons, will tackle minor improvements to senior citizens' homes, grass cutting, fence repairs and other jobs.

George Bevis, district co-ordinator of the local initiatives program, said today that 31 private groups and organizations in the Greater Victoria area have now had a total of $544,461 approved for the creation of 265 jobs.

Plant Bid Approved

The Capital Region District Board Wednesday approved the low bid of Farmer Construction Ltd., $282,918, for construction of a sewage treatment plant at Fifth Street in Sidney.

SIMPSONS-SEARS AD CORRECTION

In the Office Equipment ad in Tuesday's Feb. 22 Times, and Wednesday's Feb. 23 Colonist, the 2-drawer filing cabinet should have shown a price of 26.97, and the 4-drawer cabinet a price of 63.47. The prices were inadvertently transposed.

Health Takeover Vote Challenged

Confusion has developed over whether the Capital Region District Board voted last month in favor of taking over public health services.

The minutes of that meeting, presented for approval at the board meeting Wednesday, showed that eight directors voted in favor or regionalization and 10 voted against.

ADDED WEIGHT

However, translated to the board's voting system under which the core municipalities have proportionately greater voting strength than their outlying cousins, that resulted in a 34 to 13 decision in favor of regionalization of health services.

The motion was duly reported carried in the minutes, but the decision was challenged Wednesday by director James Campbell of the outer Gulf Islands.

He said the result did not reflect the necessary two-thirds majority stipulated under the Municipal Act when boards are considering questions of fiscal policy.

Executive director Dennis Young explained, however, that the section of the act concerned had been amended so that a two-thirds majority was now not needed in such cases.

This didn't satisfy Campbell, or Salt Spring Island director Marc Holmes, both of whom said it was improper that the minority should prevail over the majority in adopting such a major change in policy.

Although the board decided the minutes had been correctly recorded, it was agreed later that the district solicitor should examine the legality of the original voting result.

Last month, the directors decided on a divided vote to accept a provincial government cost-sharing formula "under protest." The government said it would support a 70 per cent provincial, 30 per cent local, cost-sharing split on public health costs.

One Appeal Delays Another

A city businessman's appeal against a one-year jail sentence on fraud charges was adjourned today in B.C. Court of Appeal, pending a ruling from the Supreme Court of Canada on an appeal against the conviction itself.

Siegfried Marquardt, 39, has applied to the high court in Ottawa for leave to appeal his conviction on 11 counts of fraud.

The charges arose from a project headed by Marquardt to convert a former U.S. naval vessel into a floating maritime entertainment centre in San Francisco.

The Supreme Court will hear the request for leave to appeal March 6.

In provincial appeal court today, defence counsel David Williams and Crown lawyer Brian Smith agreed that the sentence appeal should be delayed until the high court decision is handed down.

Marquardt was sentenced to one year on each of the 11 counts, the sentences to run concurrent. A two-year sentence on a 12th count of fraud was quashed after B.C. Court of Appeal in Vancouver overturned the conviction on that charge.

The accused originally was found guilty on the 12 counts by Judge M. L. T. Drake in county court, following a two-week trial in which 185 exhibits were entered and testimony filled 1,500 pages of transcript.

Marine Branch Addition Delayed

Temporarily stalled by workmen refusing to cross picket lines, a $99,250 addition to the Marine Sciences Branch of the department of Environment will be built in the Inner Harbor.

News of the contract, awarded to the Victoria firm of Cana Construction Co. Ltd. was announced by Public Works Minister J. E. Dube in Ottawa today.

A department spokesman in Victoria says work has already begun on the two-storey wood-frame addition but, because electronic supplies are also stored at the base, construction workers have refused to cross picket lines formed by electronic technicians.

The addition will be used to house the department's ocean chemistry personnel, who now operate out of Departure Bay near Nanaimo.

The spokesman said major construction is scheduled to be completed May 1.

After the laboratories and other equipment have been installed the personnel are expected to move into their new quarters this summer.

One of the main projects to be undertaken by the scientists is continued research on the transfer of pollutants from the atmosphere to the ocean.

The new addition is part of the federal special employment plan and will provide about 75 man-months of work.

The building, which was designed by the local architectural firm of Wagg and Hambleton, will be electrically heated and have an exterior finish of grooved, painted plywood panels. It will measure 126 by 32 feet.

Surveyor Noakes Dies at 88

Funeral services were held in McCall Bros. floral chapel Wednesday for Arthur Onwhyn Noakes, 88, of 565 Trutch, a life member of B.C. Land Surveyors' Corporation. He died Sunday.

A resident of Victoria for 65 years, he was born in Edmonton, Middlesex, England, and came to Canada in 1906. He joined the engineering staff of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and worked on location during its construction throughout Saskatchewan and B.C.

In 1930, he received his land surveyors commission and spent most of his career in the Victoria area. Some of the surveys he did were for the original subdivision of the Uplands Estate.

He is survived by his sons Ronald, Leonard and Hugh of Victoria, Kenneth of Vancouver; daughter, Mrs. D. W. (Beryl) Creighton; Mrs. N. (Rosemary) Brown of Vancouver, Mrs. J. E. (Enid) Brown of Willowdale, Ont., and Mrs. L. (Mary) Pack of Portland, Ore.; 25 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Balanced Budget Seen as Sask. Legislature Opens

REGINA (CP) — Indications are that the second session of the 17th Saskatchewan legislature, which opens today with the speech from the throne read by Lt.-Gov. Stephen Worobetz, could surpass the record 53-day session of 1939.

Officials of the New Democratic Party government have estimated there will be more than 100 bills presented. The total could go as high as 120, which would be close to the record 125 bills introduced in 1949.

Several cabinet members have during the last several weeks sketched major new programs, policies, department reorganizations and altered priorities for their departments.

Despite that, Premier Allan Blakeney has said he will be able to bring down a balanced budget March 10 which will not contain any tax increases affecting large numbers of people.

However, he has hinted that there may be increases in other forms of taxes, particularly those paid in royalties by the potash and oil industries.

PLAN DEATH DUTIES

The government also has announced it will impose a succession duty and legislation will be needed to cover an arrangement whereby the federal government will collect the duties.

Mr. Blakeney, who also is provincial treasurer, has been close-mouthed about his budget, but total expenditures could surpass $500 million compared with $451 million in 1971-72.

Appeal Planned

REGINA (CP) court ruling overturning the election of Liberal Allan Guy in the Athabasca provincial constituency will be appealed, Opposition Leader D. G. Steuart said.

The appeal means Guy, minister of municipal affairs and public works in the former Liberal administration which was ousted by the NDP last June, will be able to take his seat in the legislature during the upcoming session. He can sit in the legislature until a ruling is made on the appeal.

Deficit Claimed

EDMONTON (CP) — Western Canada has a $2 billion annual trade deficit in manufactured goods with Central Canada, Hu Harries, MP for Edmonton-Strathcona, said Wednesday.

Secondary industrial development must be established in the west to offset this, he told a seminar on economic and social strategy for the Edmonton region.

Probe Urged

RED DEER (CP) — Ken Haise, acting chairman of the board of governors of Red Deer College, said Wednesday he will recommend an independent inquiry into the operation of the college.

The recommendation is the result of two meetings by a special committee which discussed staff and financial problems, said Haise, one of two board members who sat on the committee. Jim Head, president of the college student association, said the recommendation for an inquiry averted a walkout scheduled today by the student body.

Layoff Announced

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Falling pulp prices on the world market have led to the layoff of 17 men at the pulp mill here, Vern Bodenheimer, vice-president in charge of the mill, said Wednesday.

Bodenheimer said the layoffs, a reduction of 5.6 per cent of the labor force, were made so the company could remain competitive with other mills and to ensure a continued economically viable plant."

Chairman Named

CALGARY (CP) — Dr. Stephen G. Peitchinis, an economist from the University of Calgary, has been selected chairman of a conciliation committee reviewing a contract dispute between three trucking companies and the Teamsters Union.

Representing the companies on the three-member board will be Neil V. German, a Calgary lawyer and president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, with Joseph Whitford of Vancouver teamsters Local 213 representing the union.

A-G Attends

REGINA (CP) — Attorney-General Roy Romanow will take part in discussions in Vancouver on problems facing west-bound freight shipments and reasons for a backlog of grain ships waiting for cargoes.

The meeting Friday has been called by the Pacific Transport Advisory Council, made up of representatives of governments from Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, the transport companies and harbor board.

EINSTEIN THEORY PROVED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists who twice hauled atomic clocks around the world in 80 hour trips say they have confirmed what Albert Einstein theorized: time is relative.

The flights also yielded new time-keeping information important to national defence, space exploration and navigation.

One of Einstein's theories of relativity holds that the time a clock measures depends on its speed relative to the earth, the stars and all other objects in the universe.

Thus, time travels more slowly for a rapidly-moving object than for a stationary one.

Astronomer Richard Keating and physicist Joseph Hafele set out to prove that Einstein theory last October when they flew around the world, first to the east and a week later to the west, with four atomic clocks in tow.

SHOULD SHOW LESS

The theory implies a clock travelling eastward at the 600-mile-an-hour speed of a jet plane should show an elapsed time a fraction of a second less than that of a comparable clock that stayed home during an 80-hour global flight.

The same clock travelling westward should show an elapsed time a fraction of a second greater than that of an earthbound clock because the plane would be flying against the earth's easterly rotation.

Keating said in an interview that the first firm measurements of the trips are consistent with these projected conclusions:

—The eastward-bound clocks in effect "ran slow" by 40-billionths of a second compared with an earthbound master clock. Put another way, time contracted for the airborne clocks.

—Travelling westward, the clocks "ran fast," or time expanded, by 275-billionths of a second.

Keating said the experiment unquestionably demonstrated a "relativistic effect," the phenomenon suggested by Einstein's theory, and marked the first time "anyone has done so while using physical clocks."

He said a major purpose of the $80,000, navy-financed project was to test how atomic clocks behave during plane trips.

No Discrimination, But Sex Will Show

KITCHENER, Ont. — The Kitchener-Waterloo office of Canada Manpower has a job going that pays $25 an hour for a six-hour week. No experience is necessary and on-the-job training is provided at a Hespeler strip club.

"We decided to advertise through Manpower offices because you never know where the local talent is until you look," said Wayne Leavere, one of the operators of the Foxy Lady Club. "We're willing to look at either a man or a woman."

ROWAN

HOLLYWOOD — A settlement has been reached by comedians Dan Rowan and Rick Martin, to buy out the interests of the former producers of "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" and to continue the show next season on NBC.

The performers had brought the half interest in the show owned by producers George Schatter and Ed Friendly. Next year the comedy hour will be produced by Paul Keyes for Romart Inc., Rowan and Martin's production company.

MARTIN

BALTIMORE — Ten-term Texas congressman John Dowdy, fined $25,000 and sentenced to 18 months in prison Wednesday, prepared today an appeal of his conviction.

Dowdy's lawyers said the 60-year-old east Texas Democrat would remain free on bond until his conviction of bribery, conspiracy and perjury charges can be reviewed by the appeals court. He was convicted of conspiring with the operator of a now-defunct Washington urban renewal firm to accept a $25,000 bribe to try to stop a federal fraud investigation of the firm, Monarch Construction Corp.

PORTLAND, Ore. — The thief who took a hand-sized fish from a tank at the Oregon Museum of Science and industry had better handle it with care — it's a piranha, a South American species with razor-sharp teeth and illegal to own without a licence.

"Whoever has it isn't going to want to keep it a secret," said museum director Loren McKinley.

"It isn't the easiest fish to handle."

LONDON — William Hamilton, an anti-royalist member of Parliament apologized Wednesday for calling Prince Charles a twerp after looking up the word in several dictionaries. He added that he believed the price to be a sensible, contented, pleasant young man.

"Who wouldn't be contented and pleasant with a guaranteed untaxed annual income of 105,000 sterling ($273,000) a year, which is likely to be doubled or even quadrupled automatically within the next five years, he questioned.

KINGSTON, Ont. — York County sends prisoners to Kingston penitentiary from the Don jail in Toronto in a flashy, expensive limousine which is rented by the county.

"We haven't any access to a wagon and we can't just hail a taxi to transport them," explained D. C. Carter, deputy sheriff for York. He said the large cars permit better security.

FRANKLIN, Tenn. Edward Caruthers, 102, was to go to circuit court today to get a divorce from his 62-year-old wife, Anna, charging his wife of two years "can't wash dishes, can't cook, wasn't no housekeeper and couldn't even sew a button on that would stay."

LONDON, Ont. — Peter Auld's admiration of Prime Minister Trudeau cost him $100 Wednesday. During the prime minister's visit here last Nov. 11, the 22-year-old London man held a banner that read: "Bienvenu To A Great Canadian And A Far Out Prime Minister."

The banner attracted the attention of an RCMP plainclothesman who then saw Auld throw a cigarette to the ground. Upon examination, the policeman discovered the cigarette was marijuana. Auld was fined $100 for possession.

Stratford Fails To Carry Play

MINNEAPOLLIS (AP) — The Stratford National Theatre of Canada opened its second season at the Guthrie Theatre Wednesday night with Lorenzaccio, a 19th-century French tragedy by Alfred de Musset.

The play centres around a Renaissance figure named Lorenzo de Medici who, in a final desperate act to assert his humanity, assassinates the tyrant Allessandro.

But the new ruler is equally inept, making Lorenzo's act futile except in history. The citizens are unprepared to declare independence and the only liberation is that of Lorenzo himself.

"The play obviously has inherent theatrical qualities and it's puzzling that the Stratford production didn't have more effect than it did," says Minneapolis Tribune reviewer Mike Steel.

CITES PROBLEMS

He cites problems of language, pace and casting as the primary reasons.

"Director Jean Gascon had a great success with this play in Montreal, in French," says Steele. "But the lyrical, rolling French prose has never adapted well to English and it doesn't now."

Steele says John Levin's translation is the best yet, "but it's hard to get away from a prosaic, even stilted prose."

The quick pace of the play also comes in for criticism. Steel says Gascon made actors talk "as though they were following a conductor gone mad without a sense of feeling or manner or ultimate humanity. The result, the reviewer says, was often delirium.

Indoor Start a Must For Canna Tubers

The Canna belongs in the tropical family of Banana, so it follows that perverse gardeners in cool temperate zones on the North Pacific coast should strive to grow these beauties in their gardens.

Hundreds try every summer, with little success. Better results can be expected by making a start now, before the end of February with aid from the heat we use in our homes.

When we plant canna tubers (the roots are thick and fleshy) in the garden during May, our soil is still pretty cool for root formation on tropical plants. The result is either rotting of the tubers in heavy soil or late root action in a more sandy soil.

Overcoming this drawback, the wise home gardener starts the canna tubers indoors in large pots. Each root is put into a pot of well drained soil, enriched with old manure, leafmould and compost. No fertilizer at planting time.

Keep the pots at temperatures between 55 to 60 deg. F. until growth shows through the soil, then move to 60 to 70 deg. F. After growth starts, see that the soil is moderately damp.

The greatest difficulty in starting hardy plants indoors is the lack of strong light. This means turning the pots of canna around halfway each day. They will do well in full sunlight if you have a place.

Don't forget the air factor to prevent too high a temperature, they will not enjoy 80 to 85 deg. F. at this stage.

By early April, begin watering the cannas with a solution of alginure to develop strong roots and good coloring in the leaves. Some are beautifully veined green; others a deep purple plum shade.

Flowers are spectacular. To have them at their best, early starting indoors in a rich soil is absolutely necessary. So is a hot summer outdoors.

When it comes to planting-out time in early June, choose the warmest spot in the garden, but also one where you can provide spacious accommodation with more old manure and compost, and water.

Continue the liquid alginure feeding right through to flowering. You should then be rewarded with gorgeous orange, red, yellow or rose blossoms slightly resembling blowsy gladiolus blooms, if I may say so.

Canna seeds will germinate if first nicked with a file and then soaked for 24 hours in warm water before sowing in small pots of sandy soil. Keep them at about 75 degs. F. to sprout. Then treat like other tropical seedlings. Later, as small plants, give them the same care as for the sprouting tubers.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

For those who are accustomed on each and every deal to "count out the distribution" of the opponents' cards, this deal is not a complicated one to play correctly. But those who "forget" to count would probably fail to fulfill the game contract arrived at by South. When the deal arose in a rubber-bridge game, our South declarer went down at a contract that he should have fulfilled.

Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

After winning the first trick with the club king, West continued with the queen of clubs, East discarding the heart deuce. Next came the club ace, East discarding another low heart as South ruffed.

The ace, king, and queen of trumps then gathered in the adversely-held pieces. Hoping that the four outstanding diamonds were divided 2-2, declarer next led the ace of diamonds, and followed up by leading another diamond. As is evident, East now had two diamond winners, and South went down a trick.

Of course, if the missing diamonds had been divided 2-2, then all the defenders would have scored in this suit would have been one trick. The fact of the matter is, however, that declarer played the diamond suit incorrectly.

Having observed that East had failed to follow suit to the second club lead, West was known to have been dealt seven clubs. And West had followed suit to three trump leads. Thus West had exactly ten cards in the black suits; and, naturally, three cards in the red suits.

What declarer should have done after drawing trumps was to have entered dummy via the heart king. He would have noted that West followed suit. Hence West would be known to have just two red cards remaining — and South would appreciate that West had been dealt two diamonds, at most; and, possibly just one diamond.

The diamond jack would then be led. If East played low, South would do likewise. If East played the queen, South would win it with the ace, felling West's ten. South would now lose only one trick in diamonds.

If West did not possess the singleton ten (the singleton king or queen would be of no help to South), then South would have to indulge in the wishful thinking that the two remaining diamonds were divided 1-1.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

9 IN MEMORIAM

PRIZEMAN — In loving memory of my husband, Sidney.
I do not need a special day
To bring you to my mind?
The days I do not think of you
Are very hard to find.
They say time heals all sorrow
And will help me to forget;
But time so far has only shown
How much I miss you yet.
God gave me strength to bear it
And courage to face the blow,
But what it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.
It was God's will to take you,
He knew you needed rest;
His garden must be beautiful,
He only takes the best.
When I am sad and lonely
And everything goes wrong,
I seem to hear you whisper,
Cheer up and carry on.
Each time I see your photo
You seem to smile and say,
Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day.
"Forever in my thoughts."
—His loving wife Barbara.

9 IN MEMORIAM

PRIZEMAN — In loving memory of Sidney Prizeman who passed away Feb. 24, 1971.
We often sit and think of him
when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak,
when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.

How to Help Transvestites

A much worried mother writes to say that one day she came home earlier than usual and found her 18-year-old boy dressed in his sister's clothes. She is terribly upset over this, and wonders if she should send the boy to a psychiatrist. Although he is masculine and is interested in boys' sports, he has fears of many things.

He is apparently what is called a transvestite — a person who has a compulsion to dress as a person of the other gender. The mother should try to accept this fact without punishing the boy, because he cannot help being the way he is, and transvestite men have told me that when they try to control their desire to "cross-dress," a great deal of mental distress builds up, making them irritable and tense and unhappy.

The man may be content, however, to wear a single piece of women's clothing under his clothes on rare occasions, or occasionally, in privacy, to dress up as a woman.

A considerable percentage of such men marry, and can be good husbands and fathers. Many a wife has been flabbergasted to find her husband dressed in her clothes. I would suggest that such a woman, before she rushes to get a divorce, consider whether the man has been a good husband to her, and father to their children. Many such wives have been willing to accept the situation, but others have not and have asked for a divorce.

City coroners tell me that every so often, at the autopsy on a normal looking man, perhaps a businessman who had dropped dead of a heart attack in the street, they are surprised to find that he was wearing feminine underwear.

If I had a transvestite son, I would want to be kind and loving and sympathetic, in spite of my sorrow. I would advise him not to get caught by the police in women's clothes, and not to flaunt his peculiarity. I would not think of sending him to a doctor, because unfortunately, very few of us doctors know much about this quirk, and I doubt if a psychiatrist could do any good.

There is an excellent journal, called "Transvestia," published by Chevalier Publications in California, which is filled with helpful information for the transvestite and his family.

There is also a book entitled "How To Be a Woman, Though Male," by Virgina Prince, Ph.D., who is an expert on this subject.

As she says, "most people would assume that any male who would do this would be either homosexual or transsexual (a sex change). This book is, however, written for a group of normally heterosexual men who admire and envy women so much that they greatly enjoy the opportunity to temporarily leave their everyday masculine selves behind and the enter the fascinating world of femininity."

Miss Prince stresses what even most of us doctors do not understand — that there is a difference between sex and gender. Sex has to do with the person's sexual organs, and with chromosomes. Gender has to do with behavior — whether it is masculine or feminine — and what the person feels himself or herself to be.

Encounter Vacations Outlined

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canada Committee outlined Wednesday a summer vacation project that will enable 200 high school students to get a look at parts of the country outside their home areas.

Called Encounter-Rencontre, the project will involve groups of students from the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and B.C. Their tours will last 10 days, winding up in Ottawa July 1 for a Dominion Day celebration.

Financed by the federal and provincial governments and the committee, the 200 students will travel by bus and train and sleep in campsites during the trip. Sleeping bags, cooking utensils and counsellors will be provided.

The committee said it hopes the "friendly interchange . . . might help to dispel much of the negative publicity which seems to emanate from our regional or linguistic differences."

Under the program, 36 Maritime students will visit Quebec and 64 Quebec students will visit the Thousand Islands, Niagara Falls and the Georgian Bay area of Ontario.

Another 64 students from Ontario will visit Montreal, Quebec City and the Laurentian Mountains, while 36 from the Prairies and B.C. will see Toronto, central Ontario, Montreal and Quebec City.

Folders explaining the program and including application forms are to be distributed in high schools this month. Winners will be notified in early May.

The Canada Committee was formed in 1968 to encourage national unity. Most of its 15,000 members live in Quebec although it seeks active support from citizens across the country.

Region Bids For Recreation

The Capital Regional District is entering the recreation field — but in a fairly limited way.

At the monthly board meeting Wednesday, directors decided to apply to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell for supplementary letters patent to add recreation to the district's functions.

Once formal approval is received, a bylaw will be passed designating Colwood, Langford and Metchosin electoral areas as "benefiting areas."

Executive director Dennis Young explained that under the provisions of the Municipal Act, this process is the only way a recreation commission can be set up to administer the Centennial swimming pool, the Juan de Fuca ice arena and Juan de Fuca park, and also co-ordinate recreational programming throughout the three areas.

He said the move would "overcome the proliferation of commissions and boards that already exist in those three areas."

That was all very well, retorted North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis, but surely by this action the board was adding to its own proliferation of duties and responsibilities?

"I'm wondering which is the lesser evil," he added.

DISTRICT SALARY HIKE SHELVED

A recommended 7½ per cent pay increase for non-union staff employed by the Capital Regional District was kept on ice Wednesday when board directors agreed that they should first study existing salary scales and job descriptions.

The board's executive committee had proposed the increase, which it said was consistent with raises awarded to members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees who work for the board.

But director James Campbell of the outer Gulf Islands said he was unable to make an intelligent decision on the proposal until he had seen details of current salaries of non-union employees.

He noted that the provincial government had set a 6½ per cent ceiling on salary increases for all public service employees, adding: "Because it was not met in the case of teachers it has caused the government to enter into punitive measures — and I think that is putting it quite literally."

The matter was tabled until more information is presented at the board's next meeting.

Wire Stand Backed

Support for Saanich council's opposition to a B.C. Hydro overhead power line through the municipality came Wednesday from the Capital Region District Board.

The board passed a resolution by Ald. Clyde Savage of Victoria "expressing our grave concern" at Hydro's plans to proceed with the scheme, despite Saanich pleas and the fact that the provincial government has set aside special funds for underground wiring projects.

The only doubts were expressed by Mayor Arthur Young of Esquimalt, who said the resolution had not presented any realistic alternatives.

"It's paying lip service to a very desirable dream, but I'm afraid it is just a dream," he added.

Flying Club Meet

The Victoria Flying Club will be host to the national convention of Royal Canadian Flying Clubs' Association Sept. 20 to 24 at the Empress, it was announced at the club's annual meeting.

It will also co-sponsor a pilots' seminar at the Red Lion on March 11 and 12 with the B.C. Aviation Council.

Shouting, Sobs Disrupt Debate On Motel Plans

A shouting match between Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and a woman resident of Salt Spring Island erupted Wednesday at the monthly meeting of the Capital Region District Board.

The incident, which lasted some two minutes, ended with board chairman Curtis issuing a rebuke to Mrs. Betty Delmonico, of Ganges, and a sobbing apology from her for interrupting the meeting.

The matter concerned a rezoning application from Mrs. Delmonico and her husband William, to permit a drive-in motel on their waterfront property at St. Mary's Lake.

As the board started to deal with the application, Salt Spring director Marc Holmes formally moved that it be rejected, in accordance with recommendations from the advisory planning commission, technical planning committee, planning department and zoning sub-committee.

At this Mrs. Delmonico jumped from her seat and advanced on Curtis at the top of the long table, brandishing a sheaf of papers and crying "Can you tell me how this was all settled this morning . . . how I received this . . ."

Curtis immediately rose and told her to resume her seat, but she refused and carried on speaking.

Words Lost in Shouting

In the ensuing interchange Mrs. Delmonico's words were lost. But Curtis, his normally smooth broadcasting voice close to shouting pitch, could be heard repeating "Will you be seated or I'll have you removed."

Finally she obeyed the instruction, and order was restored.

Outer Gulf Islands director James Campbell picked up the threads of debate by suggesting that, as the Delmonicos had made submissions to the zoning sub-committee prior to the board meeting, the application be tabled to next month's meeting for these points to be considered.

Before allowing Delmonico to address the meeting, Curtis told the couple: "This chair, in 10 years, has never had anyone fly at it with voice raised, and I will not tolerate it here or in any other chamber."

He added that apologies should be made to the board, but when Delmonico started to offer these Curtis said it was his wife who should apologize.

Delmonico said in his dealings with the Capital Regional District he didn't appear to receive answers to his letters.

His main complaint, however, was that he had been informed only the morning of the previous day that the zoning sub-committee meeting was being held Wednesday, which left his lawyer no time to prepare a brief for the hearing.

"Yet I have written all kinds of letters to the board stating that I wanted to make a formal presentation," he added.

Tears Follow Apology

As her husband finished speaking Mrs. Delmonico said: "I apologize deeply." Then she burst into tears as she added: "I have never done this before but I have never seen such an undemocratic procedure before."

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning said the applicants were given a hearing and the committee debated whether to hear from their lawyer later.

It was finally agreed that the application be tabled for the couple to make a further submission.

Outside the meeting Mrs. Delmonico explained what had upset her.

She said while waiting to appear before the sub-committee, she happened to pick up the agenda with accompanying reports and saw that the sheet containing details of their application bore the formal notation that it had been recommended for rejection by that committee before the committee had even considered the case.

Delmonico said disgustedly: "It was all neatly cut and dried before we'd even had our say."

SLICE OF THE MOON may be what the title says, but Glenlyon Boys' School student Brian Titus regards this exhibit at school's science fair with more than a little skepticism. "NASA Lunar Rock" which looks remarkably like green cheese, was displayed by Brian and Mike Wiggins, Grade 10 students, at fair which ran Wednesday night and this morning. (John McKay photo).

WALLACE OPENS BID FOR OAK BAY VOTES

G. Scott Wallace officially hit the campaign trail Wednesday night, predicting an early May election and promising to put conscience ahead of party politics.

Speaking to about 100 people at a meeting called by the Oak Bay Progressive Conservotive Association, Wallace repeated his charges that no Social Credit backbencher has any say under Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

It was refusal to toe the party line that moved the Oak Bay MLA out of the Social Credit ranks in January and into the arms of the Progressive Conservatives.

Wallace said he was impressed with newly-elected provincial Conservative leader Derril Warren.

He said that he had joined the Conservatives because of Warren but admitted during a question period that it was possible that he would only agree with the Conservative policy 95 per cent of the time.

He was greeted with applause when he said: "Now I want to comment on this. Do you want me five per cent of the time to go along with the party when in my own conscience I don't think I can?"

Asked if he would put his conscience above his constituency, Wallace said he thought he would.

Asserting his belief that an election would take place in May, Wallace said he would conduct a door-knocking campaign in his riding.

Other points made by Wallace were:

On Bennett — "He's a one-man band, a one-man show — he's a dictator. When he goes, Social Credit in British Columbia is just a house of cards — it will collapse."

On Attorney-General Leslie Peterson: Wallace said Peterson, in saying that government advertisements would not be given to the two Victoria daily newspapers because of a tobacco ad they carried, showed himself as a man who is "judge, jury and carries out the sentence as well."

Perpetual Funds: These are monies taken from the people in excess taxes. The premier makes "a big deal" of loaning back the people their own money to build schools and hospitals.

Union Demands: Collective bargaining is a right that should be preserved. If inflation results, the extra money spent by the worker is fed back into the community. It is up to the government to see that it's used to help people in need.

Eric Martin Institute: Wallace didn't think "it had worked out too well," adding that "just because you have an emotional disorder doesn't mean you should be in a great big concrete mousoleum."

Wallace said a Conservative government would advocate an auditor general "to prevent the premier from cooking the books," an ombudsman and the establishment of a proper Hansard.

Towboat Curbs Urged

The B.C. Towboat Owners' Association is trying to head off forced restrictions on use of the Johnson Street Bridge by a voluntary agreement among the bridge's major users.

A letter mailed to the association's members says the federal transport department is applying "pressure" to have the bridge mandatorily closed between 7 and 9 a.m. and between 4 and 6 p.m. — when car traffic on the bridge is at its height.

The city of Victoria recently asked the DOT to find ways of relieving the traffic congestion, including a mandatory ban on use of the bridge during rush hours.

The letter is signed by W. A. Sankey, secretary-manager of the towboat association.

"Some companies have voluntarily restricted the raising of Johnson Street Bridge from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Emergencies would be the only exception," the letter says.

"With the co-operation from towboat members in voluntarily observing these restrictions we can forestall any attempts to have legislation enforced to have the bridge closed for two hours in the a.m. and two hours in the p.m."

Group Protests CPR Expansion

A group of Dolphin Road residents has filed protests with North Saanich council against CPR intentions to expand its truck-ferry operations in their area.

Because of present truck noises at night "this is about the only place in the world where prime waterfront property is going down in value," according to Jack D. Smith, 2224 Dolphin Road.

He said the truck ferry now comes in around 10:30 p.m. and takes until the early morning to unload before starting to reload about 4 p.m.

"Do you realize the racket made by 70 big trailer truckers when they are driven over a steel ramp? Then there is the noise of their exhausts, air brakes, and the continual gnashing of gears . . . some nights it's like a bunch of screaming banshees."

Smith said the CPR, though its subsidiary, Marathon Realty, has indicated to some Dolphin Road residents that it wants to expand its landing site because business has doubled in the last three years.

"When they moved into this area about three years ago they said they wouldn't have any need to expand for at least 10 years," Smith said.

The CPR has yet to file a request with council to have the property it wants rezoned from single family to industrial.

Man to Stand Trial For 1967 Slayings

A Riverview Mental Hospital patient has been ordered by the provincial cabinet to stand trial for the murder of a couple in Vancouver five years ago.

Arthur John Towell has been held at Riverview since the deaths of David Webster, 31, an assistant professor at the University of British Columbia and his wife Marlene, 30.

They were killed by a sniper in the back yard of their home in 1967 and two other persons were wounded. The couple had four children.

A coroner's jury found the Websters had been killed by shots fired by Towell while he was of unsound mind. He was ordered committed to Riverview.

In a Cabinet order issued Wednesday, Towell was ordered transferred to Oakalla Correctional Centre to "await his trial or other disposition according to law." He was certified as having recovered from mental illness.

Cong, North Viets Attacks Slack Off

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacks slacked off during the night, and the U.S. command said American fighter-bombers flew no strikes in South Vietnam during the period.

But heavy U.S. air strikes continued against the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos, North Vietnam's supply line to the South. Sources said American planes were averaging between 200 and 300 strikes a day against the 250-mile network.

The South Vietnamese command reported 13 attacks during the 24-hour period ending at dawn today, the lowest in 2½ weeks. Since Feb. 11, Communist attacks have been averaging more than 30 a day.

In the political sphere, President Nguyen Van Thieu said he would welcome a conference of Southeast Asia nations to neutralize the area.

A brief communique said Thieu offered to hold the summit conference in Saigon. He said North Vietnam would be welcome.

Free Press Threat

Times News Services

The province's withholding of advertising from Victoria's two daily papers "must be the most serious threat to the freedom of the press that this province has ever experienced," the president of the B.C. Weekly Newspapers Association said Wednesday.

Stan Stodola, who is also publisher of the Osoyoos Times in the Okanagan, said in a telegram to Premier Bennett the ad-ban decision was "an unprecedented form of economic reprisal which does not belong in a freedom loving country." The government announced last week it would no longer advertise in the two papers after they ran tobacco ads.

Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate said today the newspaper will not follow the example of the two Victoria newspapers in flouting the provincial government's ban on tobacco advertising.

"We are going to abide by the law which, incidentally, we think is crazy and ludicrous," he said.

"But the proper place to fight it is in the courts, where it is going forward now."

Keate added the Sun has "a lot of sympathy" for the Victoria Times and Colonist, following the provincial government's announcement last week that the papers will receive no more government advertising because they ran a cigarette ad.

"Our feeling is that in due course the law will be changed, if not by this government," he said.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, a lawyer told B.C. Supreme Court Justice E. E. Hinkson that the Social Credit government is trying to "dictate by prohibition" through legislation banning advertisements of liquor and tobacco in the province.

The lawyer, Doug Brown, was continuing an argument on behalf of four tobacco companies and three publishing firms in the second day of a test case challenging the validity of the Tobacco Advertis-

Ottawa Curbs Methadone, 'Speed' Use

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is clamping tighter controls on methadone, frequently used as a heroin substitute, and amphetamine drugs which are commonly called "speed."

Health Minister John Munro announced in the Commons today that new regulations will be enforced whereby the drugs can be prescribed only with his permission.

Following recommendations made by the LeDain commission on the non-medical use of drugs,. Munro said physicians receiving permission to prescribe methadone must be associated with a specialized clinic.

The regulatory changes can be made in a few weeks, he said, and the program should be fully operational by June 1.

"In the meantime, I call on the physicians of Canada to utilize retraint in the use of methadone."

The minister said his department has received many reports concerning the misuse and abuse of methadone.

The LeDain commission, in suggesting that use of the drug be restricted to specialized treatment clinics, described the drug as "the most promising of all available approaches to the opiate narcotic dependence problem." Mr. Munro said several months ago there was a growing methadone-abuse problem among non-heroin addicts.

SEES OVER-PRESCRIBING

Mr. Munro said that while smaller amounts of amphetamine now are being prescribed, "considerable evidence has come to the attention of my department indicating the overprescribing of these drugs by some medical practitioners."

There also was evidence that the related drug phenmetrazine and phendimetrazine are misused in a similar manner.

As a result, he said, these drugs will be limited to the treeatment of legitimate medical disorders—in this case, the relatively obscure diseases of narcolepsy and hyperkinesis.

Doctors no longer will be allowed to prescribe them for the treatment of obesity in the form of "diet pills."

A list of consulting physicians will be drawn up to verify the two diseases.

Mr. Munro said restrictions on the use of amphetamines will not prevent "speed freaks" from getting drugs through illicit sources.

"Nevertheless, this action does indicate the serious light in which the government views amphetamine abuse and should have marked effects on an important aspect of abuse of these drugs—that drugs on prescription."

He expected this program to be operational by Sept. 1.

'DEAR JACK... RE THAT PROFIT'

"Dear Jack.

"Congratulations! I have just heard about the very healthy financial report you presented to your shareholders. I would remind you, however before you allocate these profits that by June 15 we expect to strike a bargain on the fair distribution of this bonanza among the workers in your company."

B.C.'s Most Wanted Criminal Arrested

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said today that Raymond Joseph Palmer, sought for questioning on the mailing of a bomb which blew off both hands of a British Columbia prison guard, has been arrested in Sydney, Australia.

Palmer, who escaped from the British Columbia Penitentiary in 1970, was arrested today in a dawn raid on a suburban Sydney home. Police sharpshooters surrounded the house and a squad armed with pistols and shotguns burst inside to find Palmer cooking breakfast for a young woman and two children living there.

He threw up his hands and backed against the kitchen wall. Police seized a large quantity of ammunition and two revolvers. Palmer was held on charges of being an illegal immigrant and is being questioned about three holdups there.

A Vancouver RCMP officer is expected to arrive in Australia soon to apply for an extradition order.

Proceedings were under way to have Palmer charged as an habitual criminal when he escaped from the penitentiary in 1970 while serving a six-year sentence for narcotics possession.

RCMP also want to question him about the slaying of a police informant as well as the bomb incident on Christmas Eve, 1966.

Guard Frank Newton had returned from work to find several Christmas packages waiting at his home in North Surrey. He took them into the kitchen and began opening them as his son, Norman, then 10, watched.

The bomb was concealed in

GIRL FOUND UNCONSCIOUS ON MALAHAT

A teen-aged girl was found unconscious and seriously injured in a ditch beside the Shawnigan Lake cutoff a mile from the Malahat late Wednesday night.

RCMP said the girl, estimated to be about 14, is in critical condition at Cowichan District Hospital. She was found at 11.15 p.m.

The girl carried no identification and police have been unable to determine her identity. Shawnigan Lake detachment is investigating possible assault or hit-run.

Passports Don't All Come Easy

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. William Dennison, wife of Toronto's mayor, said Wednesday she "just sat down and wept" when she was refused a new passport last week until she could provide proof of Canadian citizenship.

She said in an interview her mother had brought her from England "as a babe in arms" in 1910 and she had lived in Canada ever since. Four previous passport applications had been granted "with no trouble at all."

But she ran into stiffened government procedures when she applied for a renewal. The government passport office said she'd have to provide proof of citizenship.

She had to produce a wedding certificate — the Dennisons have been married 33 years—and birth certificate. They were sent to Ottawa and then a new citizenship certificate had to be notarized by the city clerk.

"I had to laugh about it at first," said Mayor Dennison who leaves Sunday with his wife on a 10-day trip to Israel. "But she was pretty angry and I agree with her."

The mayor said it "seems ridiculous that a person who has lived her life in Canada—since she was four months old—and held passports for years should suddenly be told she's not a citizen just like she was a newcomer."

Peking Talks Explore Links

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai held a three-hour secret summit session today, exploring ways of opening future channels of friendship between the United States and China.

They then spent two more hours together at a friendly, informal dinner.

Over-all, the two leaders were in each other's company for five hours without interruption but strict secrecy continued to prevail on their discussions.

Their lengthy meeting came a few hours after Nixon declared at the centuries-old Great Wall of China that he hopes his China visit would help break down walls of any kind — diplomatic as well as physical — that "divide the peoples of the world."

Nixon and Chou began their latest talk at 5:15 p.m. Peking time and were closeted together until 8:15 p.m. They then joined their wives, advisers and other guests for the two-hour dinner in another room of the mammoth Great Hall of the Peoples in central Peking.

Since Nixon's arrival in China four days ago, the two world leaders have been together approximately 25 hours, more than half of that time devoted to official discussions.

Newsmen were given no inkling of information on the progress of the latest Nixon-Chou get-together, but an air of cordiality seemed to be still prevailing.

It was definitely learned that the thorny issue of Taiwan, where the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek holds forth, was a principal topic of discussion by Nixon and Chou.

Meanwhile, in London, an unofficial Soviet publication launched a sharp personal attack on Nixon and voiced strong official suspicion of the Sino-American talks in one of the first broad comments on what it termed The Peking Opera.

NEWS BRIEFS

Loffmark's Conflict

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is quitting the legislature's education committee because of a possible conflict of interest. A notice of motion on today's order paper says Loffmark will be discharged from further attendance on the education committee and shifted to the public accounts and printing committee for balance of the session.

Technicians Back

CBC technicians were back at work at most centres across Canada today as mediators conferred with union and management representatives in Montreal in an effort to resolve issues that have led to rotating strikes against the corporation for more than a month.

Dead Man Suspect

MANCHESTER, England (Reuter) — Police said today that the body of a man found battered on a railway line in central England was the person they suspected of hacking two sisters to death with an axe, in front of three young children Wednesday night.

City Man Knifed, Dead; Suspect Goes to Police

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

A 21-year-old man was stabbed to death in front of a hotel doorway early today while police officers were in the hotel parking lot investigating another matter.

Russell Streeter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin G. Streeter, 520 Ridley, Colwood, was pronounced dead at Queen Victoria General Hospital at 2.10 a.m., less than half an hour after the stabbing.

Police are questioning a 20-year-old man who turned himself in at city headquarters this morning.

Constables Frederick Wilfred Mills and Arthur Robert Blackie were in the parking lot on the south side of the Colony Motor Inn at Douglas and Hillside at 1:38 a.m.

The officers were interviewing witnesses in their cruiser after an unidentified man threw a beer bottle through the windshield of a patron's car.

At 1:45 a.m., Streeter stumbled to the side of the police car and collapsed to the pavement, with two stab wounds in the stomach and one in the chest.

The victim was rushed to hospital, where he was pronounced dead shortly after arrival.

There were 30 to 40 persons in the parking lot when the stains indicate the slaying stabbing occurred. Blood took place about 10 feet from an outside door which leads to the hotel beer parlor and coffee shop.

At 9:30 a.m., police said, the suspect walked up to the information desk at Fisgard Street police headquarters. The suspect said nothing, but a man with him introduced the suspect and told the desk officer, "I think you're looking for this man."

The suspect and a number of witnesses were being questioned this afternoon by detectives. A charge was expected to be laid later today.

The police cruiser was parked about 50 feet from the apparent scene of the slaying.

A hotel spokesman said there had been no fights or other incidents in the beer parlor before closing time at 1:30 a.m.

Police said, however, there were reports of an argument involving Streeter, the suspect and another man outside the hotel.

SHE WANTS WINGS

BELGRADE (UPI) — A 22-year-old Yugoslav air hostess who survived a 31,000-foot fall from an exploding aircraft nearly one month ago now reads, smokes, drinks coffee and wants to fly again, a Belgrade newspaper said today.

Vesna Vulovic, the sole survivor of the Yugoslav Airlines plane that crashed over Czechoslovakia Jan. 26 killing 22 passengers and five crew members, is recovering in a Prague hospital from brain, spine, kidney, liver, leg and other injuries.

'Safety Violated'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for striking marine radio inspectors said Wednesday his union believes vessels on the West Coast are violating federal radio safely inspection laws.

Dave McLeod, a spokesman for the electronics division of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, estimated that the radio safety certificates of at least a dozen ships have expired since the union went on strike Feb. 6.

Ed Peck, president of the Towboat Industrial Relations Association, said Wednesday he had no knowledge of any towboats operating with invalid certificates.

Meanwhile poor weather in Eastern Canada and a strike of the 2,200 airport technicians combined today to disrupt commercial air travel across the country.

All scheduled morning flights to the Maritimes out of Montreal were cancelled because of a storm expected to drop three to six inches of snow in the east.

'Go and Get Him Yelled General'

Times News Services

COLERAINE, Northern Ireland — Two newsmen said Wednesday that a British army general urged paratroopers to attack demonstrators during the "bloody Sunday" shooting in Londonderry which left 13 persons dead.

One newsman also said a soldier fired two shots at him.

THIRD DAY

Brian Cashinella of The Times of London and Simon Winchester of The Guardian testified Wednesday, the third day of the one-man inquiry into the Jan. 30 shootings being conducted by Lord Widgery, Britain's lord chief of justice.

Cashinella said Maj. Gen. Robert Ford, army commander in Northern Ireland, yelled "Go on the paras — go and get him!"

Paratrooper squads leaped a barricade and began chasing civil rights marchers, he said.

Cashinella said he understood the command meant for the men to arrest the demonstrators.

IN BOGSIDE

He said he was walking with a crowd inside Londonderry's Roman Catholic Bogside district when "three or four army vehicles, coming fast, came down into the area and the crowd started running."

Winchester said soldiers ran behind the vehicles.

He said he heard six shots.

"People were very frightened indeed, because the vehicles were coming very fast," he said. "There was chaos, confusion, hysteria and screaming."

HALL BURNED

Meanwhile masked raiders today burned the town hall in Strabane, near Londonderry, birthplace of John Dunlap, the man who printed the U.S. declaration of independence.

A gang of attackers, some carrying weapons and some masked, held town hall workers at gunpoint while they splashed the building with gasoline, then set it on fire with bombs. There were no casualties.

In Belfast, troops found an arms cache in the garden of a Roman Catholic convent and a soldier was hit by a guerrilla sniper. Army headquarters said he was badly wounded.

Jeers Greet Geoffroy Explanation

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The opposition shouted with laughter today when Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer told the Commons today the only question in the minds of prison authorities in the Yves Geoffroy case was whether he should be given leave of 50 or 72 hours.

Goyer said they decided on 50 hours for the convicted wife murderer.

Geoffroy married Carmen Parent outside the prison walls Christmas Eve and then vanished on a forged passport.

Goyer's new statement in the Commons on the case led to a renewed demand by the Conservatives for a judicial inquiry and by the NDP for the tabling of all pertinent documents.

The Liberals did not join in the laughter and many looked embarrassed.

Goyer said 14 persons were involved in the decision to allow Geoffroy out of prison to be married after serving 14 months of a life sentence for strangling his wife and setting the body afire.

Goyer said the decision by these 14 was unanimous.

The "only" question, he added, was whether Geoffroy should be given 50 or 72 hours outside the prison to be married to the woman with whom he had lived for nine months while his wife was still alive.

David Lewis, NDP leader, said the three documents tabled so far by Goyer — on orders of Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux — show that everyone involved assumed the marriage would take place within the prison, St. Vincent de Paul.

Goyer said there are other documents in the case, such as the recorded decisions of prison authorities.

Lewis demanded that all the documents be made public and Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) renewed a demand for a full judicial inquiry.

Lewis said Geoffroy's request last June 28 to get married did not refer to any marriage outside the prison.

Goyer said Geoffroy's request to be married outside the prison was made to a penitentiary official, though the minister did not say whether the request was made in writing.

The minister said he might create a precedent if he ta-

TELEBUS: the new transit system that drives people out of their cars

'Send a Bus to the Jones' Home'

"You can put a three-year-old on this service and he'll be delivered to the door."

The service is called Telebus — a new kind of public bus in Regina which consultant Charles Clapham says is saving money, driving people out of their cars and taking a nip out of those 50-below-zero prairie winters.

Clapham today described the system to city officials, downtown businessmen and local transit authorities.

The system sounds much like a taxi service which carries up to 20 passengers instead of only one. Half-size buses are used, making the service cheaper than a taxi, and slightly more expensive than regular route buses.

The telebuses are geared into a rgular bus system, and have improved service to the less populated areas of suburban Regina. Regular bus fares are 25 cents for adults, and the telebus costs an extra dime.

The system has "introduced an element of personal service," Clapham said.

The driver can greet his passengers with a "Good morning, Mrs. Jones," because he knows exactly who each passenger is in advance.

Mrs. Jones, living on the edge of a suburban subdivision, can phone the control centre the evening before At the appointed time a small bus arrives at her door — and waits a maximum of 30 seconds.

She pays 35 cents and transfers to a regular route bus waiting at a shopping centre midway downtown. On her way home, the system is reversed.

The system is enjoyed by women and children who otherwise might not chance long walks after dark, Clapham said. But it is also an improvement in most areas on the old ordinary route system through the suburbs used by persons travelling to work.

In one area, five regular routes have been reduced to two. The result is a saving in driver costs. A $35,000 saving was experienced in a year, and increased use of the public bus service as a whole brought in new revenue of $40,000.

Clapham said the success of Telebus is largely due to Atkinson, who has a flare for marketing the system.

He also said the Telebus is ideal for Regina which has extremely cold winters. A passenger waits in the warmth of his home until the bus is at the door.

The system is carrying 1,900 people on peak days, about 25 per cent of which used to drive cars.

Clapham made no guesses about the suitability to Victoria, bus said it could be designed to serve any urban centre with low-density suburban areas.

. . . And Still Counting

A HELPING HAND has been given to members of the Robert Sam family, whose home was destroyed by fire Sunday, by students of Craigflower Elementary. Shown here presenting a cheque for $115 to Denise Sam is Richard Chadwick, a Grade 7 student who personally collected $37 and some clothing for the family. A school spokesman said about $30 more was raised today. Other Sam girls in the picture are (left to right) Nancy, Roberta and Barbara. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

'Recreation Land' Sale Set In MB Real Estate Move

Huge tracts of land no longer suitable for logging will be subdivided and sold as real estate even though J. V. Clyne, chairman of MacMillan-Bloedel which owns the property, describes it as "primarily recreation land."

Clyne made the comment today following an announcement last week in the company magazine, MB, that the firm intends to go into the real estate business.

CLYNE
. . . details in April

"It is primarily recreation land," Clyne said. He added that the land involved will be detailed publicly in April and includes some waterfront acreage.

The land has been purchased from the parent company by MacMillan Bloedel Properties Ltd., a newly-formed company. The acreage is scattered on the lower half of Vancouver Island, the Sechelt Peninsula and Powell River areas and the Gulf Islands, according to the magazine.

Douglas F. McCrimmon will be in charge of the new real estate operation, the magazine report said.

Although some residential and industrial parcels that do not need extensive servicing are available now, it will be some time before all the acreage will be ready for market, according to Robert Bonner, MB vice-chairman.

"We have just started," he said.

Clyne told the Times: "What I'm trying to do is to carefully accommodate ourselves to existing conditions and if logging these areas are going to create environmental discussion, I'd just as soon use them for something else."

He claimed that his company can now maintain all its operations in perpetuity with its existing allowable annual cut.

But lands the company is unable to use for forestry purposes — close to communities, for example, would be developed for real estate purposes, he added.

"Since these lands are taxed at a rate applied to forest operations rather than full real estate taxes, it would not be fair to keep them at a preferred rate," Clyne said.

More Pressure to Expand

Meanwhile, opponents of the plan contended that the decision would aggravate Vancouver Island's land-use problems and increase pressure for expansion of logging operations on public lands.

Ken G. Farquharson, of Vancouver, president of the Sierra Club of B.C., a conservationist group, said the company's move will invariably lead to other logging companies going into real estate.

He claimed MB's move would eventually remove considerable areas of land from sustained-yield forestry and so reduce the flow of fibre to the company's mills, leading to loss of jobs.

"Yet this is the same company that is vigorously opposing the withdrawal of public forest along the West Coast Lifesaving Trail to improve recreation in the Pacific Rim National Park," he said. "It's reason, a shortage of fibre leading to loss of jobs at the mills.

Their decision backs up our contention that MB has put company profits ahead of the interests of the community in the Nitinat situation," he said.

"It also clearly demonstrates the pressures that will rise to expand logging in Crown forests as it becomes more profitable to turn private forest into subdivisions rather than operate it as a sustained-yield forest," he added.

Rick Careless, chairman of the Victoria Sierra, said: "Yet the same company when it comes to its own private timber lands operated under tree farm licences, is judge and jury on the question of whether it's best use is for real estate and recreation."

Careless pointed out that nearly the total length of the east coast of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands is privately owned.

BOARD TO PROBE HOTEL DISMISSALS

The registrar of the B.C. Labor Relations Board confirmed today the board will examine a recent labor dispute at the Sidney Hotel.

Workers at the hotel charged earlier this week that about 20 of them were fired because they intend joining a union. Since then a number have been rehired.

"We have recei d a complaint and it is going to be investigated," registrar G. H. O'Neill said today.

The Labor Relations Act prohibits employers from dismissing employees because they want to join or continue in a union.

Day Care Unit Ready To Ease the Pressure

A $375,000 addition to Queen Victoria (St. Joseph's) Hospital to handle minor surgery will be officially opened Friday and accept its first patients 10 days later.

The ambulatory care or day care unit as it is called will serve patients whose surgery or treatment does not require them to stay overnight.

With two operating rooms and 18 beds for surgery patients, it can handle up to 5,300 cases a year. The treatment section, for procedures which don't require an anaesthetic, can care for up to 7,000 cases annually.

The addition is a one-storey structure alongside the hospital's emergency department. Construction started last Aug. 3. The $290,000 for the building and $85,000 for equipment came from the provincial government, the Capital regional hospital district and a $67,000 grant from the Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Woodward Foundation.

The treatment section of the unit has cubicles for five patients and two treatment rooms. There is also a laboratory and a room for putting on or changing casts which can handle two patients at a time.

Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, the hospital's executive director, said today the unit will relieve long-standing pressure in three areas.

The emergency department will be freed from a number of treatment functions to concentrate on real emergency cases, which are increasing at the rate of 8 per cent a year.

Eight beds in the hospital which had been used for same-day surgery cases will how be available for acute cases.

Problem proscessing patients in the emergency department and then moving them to the fifth floor operating rooms for minor surgery, together with the crowding this created in the recovery room, will be eased.

"Having all these facilities in one unit will be much more efficient."

The trend toward handling surgery cases without an overnight stay in hospital stems from two factors, the shortages of beds and improved anaesthetics, he said.

Patients having minor surgery now get anaesthetics which don't generally make them sick so they are able to go home sooner.

Most of the patients will be in the unit only five or six hours. Coffee and cookies will be available for them in the latter stages of recovery.

The opening of the unit will mean an addition of about 10 to the hospital staff, most of them registered nurses. While the rest of the hospital operates round the clock, the day care unit will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Woman Reinstated By Welfare Office

A petite and determined 19-year-old French-Canadian woman has been given a reprieve by the Victoria welfare office in its attempts to send her back to Drummondville, Que.

Dianne Smith, who was cut off welfare and offered a train ticket back to Quebec earlier this week, was today reinstated on welfare until her appeal to the provincial department of rehabilitation is decided, Mrs. Jone Lieberher, case advocate for the Community Action Group, said today.

Miss Smith, who has been looking for work since she came here in September, refused to pick up the train ticket and took her plight to the CAG.

Welfare director Alex Davidson had said the woman has no chance to find work here because of language difficulties.

Miss Smith, a seamstress, who knew no English when she came, is taking an English course with Camosun College and and spoke to reporters in English on Tuesday.

SMITH

Mrs. Lieberherr said Davidson has cancelled the railway ticket and will give Miss Smith a $20 food voucher and two more weeks' rent.

Davidson said the decision to cut the girl off had come from the rehabilitation department. Its minister, Phil Gaglardi, who will not allow anyone in the department but himself to talk to the press, has been unavailable since Tuesday for comment on what basis decisions to persuade persons to leave the province are made.

Mrs. Lieberherr said a similar reprieve has also been gained for Mike Harwood, 33, a former insurance salesman, who came here three months ago from Toronto with his wife and two children.

Harwood supported his family on savings for 2½ months while he looked for construction work here. And when he applied for welfare he was offered transportation money to return to Toronto.

He will now be supported until an appeal is heard, Mrs. Lieberherr said.

Mrs. Susan Talbot, president of the CAG, said the provincial government's intimidation of such welfare recipients contravenes the Canada Assistance Act and infringes upon a person's basic right to freedom of movement within the country.

$10,000 Wallace Scholarship Biggest of Five New Awards

The University of Victoria has established five new scholarships and bursary funds totalling $30,000.

The largest is more than $10,000, set up in the name of Robert T. Wallace, former UVic president. Income from the fund will go to a deserving student in third year honors.

Four other funds, each of $5,000, will provide scholarships and bursaries for students in specific areas of study.

The Dr. Douglas H. Taylor Lee memorial fund, set up by Dr. Anathalie W. Lee in memory of her husband, will provide a scholarship for a second or third year student planning medical studies. A pre-med student will also benefit from the Lucy and Margaret Corbet scholarship fund, set up from the estate of Margaret Corbet, 1725 Beach Drive.

Faculty of education students will be eligible for two new bursaries.

The G. Clifford Carl bursary fund will provide a $300 annual bursary to a third or fourth year student specializing in biological studies.

Another $300 bursary will go toc a "deserving and promising" stdent with at least a second class average from the Clearihue bursary fund, which has been increased to $5,000. It is named after I. M. Clearihue and Judge J. B. Clearihue.

Meeting Called to Save Home

A meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 8, at the University of Victoria for citizens who want to save the old Wilson home at Courtney and Blanshard.

The meeting, which will be held in the lounge of the Student Union Building, has been called by Caroline Smyly, former curator of history at the Provincial Museum.

She originally planned to hold the meeting in her home but she said the response was so great that larger quarters had to be found.

Mrs. Smyly has suggested that the house, the last historic home in downtown Victoria, be purchased and preserved by the city.

Opposed to turning the house into a museum, Mrs. Smyly has also advocated that the city persuade Wilson to preserve the house and include it in his proposed $4.5 million 16-storey apartment-office complex.

Where Have All Those Stations Gone?

MUCH AS I HATE TO admit it, there are times when a picture does actually speak louder than words. Last week, we ran a Bill Halkett shot that brought responses from Seattle, Campbell River and numerous points between.

Bill's picture showed a young semi-spaniel taking its elderly Pekingese house companion for an airing in a little red wagon. The sight was a familiar one to Bromley Place neighbors of Harry and Esme Windle, whose pets these pooches were.

As for the Windles, they found nothing extraordinary in the daily jaunt. Year-old Tammy didn't object to his spell in harness, Vodka the Peke, slowed by extreme age, obviously enjoyed the ride.

"We never expected the reaction that picture produced," says Mrs. Windle. "Even before our paper was delivered, the phone began to ring.

"Everyone who called said pretty much the same thing — that the picture of our dogs had given them something to laugh over in a troubled world."

Mrs. Windle, a gallant lady who makes the best of the worst, is glad the picture brought pleasure to so many.

It means a lot to her and her husband, too, for a reason which they feel you should know.

One evening early this week, Vodka rose laboriously from her favorite place on the rug, and demanded to be picked up. Minutes later, at the venerable age of 17, she died peacefully in her mistress's arms.

"We miss her," says Esme Windle. "But she had a very long, good life, and we have that picture to help keep her in memory."

Recent CPR claims that promotion and improved service have brought no appreciable increase in Esquimalt and Nanaimo Dayliner traffic fetch a response from a United Transportation Union spokesman.

J. C. Mason, chairman of UTU Local 1051, writes from Nanaimo to suggest that "while in essence these claims are most probably truths, what is left unannounced completely nullifies any of the improvements so made."

Mason points out that in August, 1970, when arguments for and against a CPR bid to discontinue the passenger service were heard by transport commissioners at Victoria, 43 stations were listed between this city and the end-of-steel at Courtenay.

"As fares can only be sold between stations listed," Mason goes on, "there were these 43 places fares could be charged to or from. On June 1, 1971, a new tariff covering E and N fares was issued, increasing them by 10 per cent, and reducing the number of stations to 23 . . . again, on Feb. 15, 1972, another new tariff came into effect showing a further increase in general fares and a reduction in listed stations to 17."

His contentions:

That people in rural areas going to and from the cities face the prospect of double or triple fares because of the station closure.

That if the company feels those stations must be deleted, it should allow conductor and ticket agents to charge fares on a mileage basis.

Mason urges public protest against actions which he sees as attempts to get around the CTC ruling which retained a rail passenger service for Vancouver Island.

"If these station deletions go unchecked," he warns, "it will only take a few more months to wipe out most of the remaining 17."

I hope the UTU chairman is wrong there. But he could be right, and with this in mind, I add a warning of my own for those who would have any rail line remain in passenger biz:

Use it, or lose it.

It happens that one of this department's scouts got tired of waiting at a downtown stop for a Gordon Head bus on Wednesday morning.

So when a University bus happened along, she boarded it and in due time alighted outside UVic's Student Union Building.

She was shortcutting her way to Finnerty Road when through the Sub windows, she glimpsed a sight that halted her in her tracks. Everywhere, it seemed, were white-sheeted cots with bodies sprawled upon them.

"For a moment," says she, "I was convinced there'd been a bombing or something. The place looked like a disaster area."

But only for a moment. First shock over, she spotted a Red Cross truck and a sign that made all plain. It read, "Blood Donors."

Peat Moss Possible Oil Spill Weapon

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — Peat moss may become the front-line fighter in this British colony's battle against oil pollution.

A government committee here is investigating peat moss and if it proves to do the job effectively it will be stockpiled.

But Bermuda still has a problem even if the peat moss is successful in cleaning up a major oil spill—disposing of the oil after it has been cleaned up and collected.

L. P. Gutteridge, head of the government's oil disaster committee, admits a method of disposal has not yet been found.

"In other places they burn it in open spaces, but we haven't the open spaces here," he said. "It is one of the things we still have to find out."

In Canada, peat moss and straw were used in the cleanup following the grounding of the oil tanker Arrow in 1970 in Chedabucto Bay off Arichat, N.S. Officials disposed of the material by burying it in pits at sites selected by the Nova Scotia lands and forests department.

WORKED EFFECTIVELY

The idea of burning was rejected because of the air pollution it would cause.

Since the Arrow disaster, the federal transport department has been stockpiling peat moss and straw. The Atlantic regional director of the department, Frank Weston, said that while the materials were effective in almost any temperature, they worked best is moderate weather.

In exceptionally cold weather, the oil thickens and becomes hard to penetrate with straw; in hot weather, it thins out and is difficult to absorb.

There is no way of preventing a large spill from hitting the Bermuda coastline and Gutteridge said the colony could not afford the highly expensive equipment necessary to cope with one.

"We would have to get assistance from abroad."

He said Bermuda is still looking at various types of equipment the colony could afford.

"We want something that has dual purpose—something we can use for other things so it is not just sitting in storage the whole time waiting for an oil slick that might not come until 10 years from now."

Bermuda's much photographed pink-sanded beaches are already faced with a small but constant oil pollution problem. Many beachside cottage colonies and hotels stock oil cleaners for their guests. At most beaches globules of oil have been washed ashore to plague the swimmers.

Bermuda has a long coast line to cover despite her small area of 20 square miles. As a result part of a newly-formed contingency plan calls for the involvement of the marine and ports department, the department of agriculture, department of public works, the police force, fire brigade, the Bermuda Biological Station and the Bermuda Regiment.

"A major oil disaster could happen tomorrow," Gutteridge said. "The committee will not waste any time in getting the contingency plan set up. We depend on our beaches for our livelihood. Also we must protect our underwater life. We must find a comprehensive and effective solution."

'Con-Cerns' Offer Aid To Ex-Cons

CALGARY (CP) — The last time he was in prison, Lawrence Oshanek decided he had a past but not a future.

"I knew the next year of my life was going to be spent behind prison bars and that's stupid. I started asking a lot of questions."

The soul-searching developed into an organization called the Con-Cern Society.

It was formally registered as a society in December, 1970, while Mr. Oshanek, its first president, was serving a sentence in the Calgary Correctional Institute.

He was released last May and the 25-year-old Yorkton, Sask. native began implementing the aims of the society.

"Social survival for ex-cons" is the society's main purpose, said Mr. Oshanek.

"We have all experienced personal failure, not once but many times. We decided it might be easier to survive as a group rather than individuals. Con-Cern is just a society of friends in which we help each other."

OFFERS A ROOF

Other Con-Cern goals are:

- To give prisoners a place to stay while on a pass;
- To obtain employment;
- To help in dealings with social service agencies.

The program also says:

"We will be here when you need someone to talk with . . . to help in any way to make it easier to stay straight."

The organization recently received a federal government grant of $37,475 which will put the former prisoners to work for non-profit groups in the city. Pay cheques will come from the grant, given under the winter works program, until the men obtain permanent employment.

Welfare is ruled out as Mr. Oshanek, now employed as an ironworker, wants the ex-prisoners accustomed to supporting themselves.

Con-Cern has two houses for former prisoners, the majority of which have done more than one sentence. The president had done 5½ years in different prisons.

Coming out of prison is a crisis, Mr. Oshanek said.

"Even people who knew you well before you went in have a questioning attitude toward you when you're out.

"There's a traditional fence around people who have been in prison, and the only people who don't feel it are the ones who have grown up in a family where prison is familiar.

"We talk a lot about employment discrimination, but perhaps far more important is the social kind of discrimination — the traditional stigma a man faces when he is released from prison."

The president's trouble with the law started at an early age, although he can't pinpoint who or what is to blame.

"I think I made my first break and entry at the age of six. I know I was never taught to break and enter. I was never taught to drive a car, but I was driving cars at 11 and went on a year's probation at that age for being the leader of a car theft ring."

Mr. Oshanek said it might have been school or the people he met that had a "big effect."

"The corrections department is bending backwards for anyone who might have a solution to people going back to prison for the same offence. Obviously, the corrections department doesn't have a solution, or it would be a more viable kind of situation than it is."

Something like Con-Cern is needed in Canada, he said.

"This country has the highest per-capita incarceration rate in the Western world, and a recidivism rate of about 80 per cent. Four out of five first offenders go back to jail. To me, that means something is really wrong somewhere."

'Heap Big Indian' To Bite Dust

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Grade 5 reader featuring a short story portraying a Northwest Territories Indian as a thief who wanted to prove he was a "heap big Indian" is to be revised, the publishers announced Tuesday.

The story has brought repeated objections from British Columbia Indians, who consider it derogatory, and its removal from the reader was urged by the Indian Resources Education Centre at the University of B.C.

A spokesman for the publishers, J. M. Dent and Sons of Toronto, said the story — published in the reader Under Canadians Skies — will be replaced by one on the early days of the RCMP.

A spokesman for the provincial education department said the revised readers will replace worn out books starting in September, but that there are no plans to withdraw texts already in use. However, the department is considering circulating separately a version of The Almighty Voice story considered more acceptable by the UBC centre.

Lead Cut Ordered

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said Tuesday that it is ordering a reduction of the lead content in gasoline to protect the public health.

EPA administrator William Ruckelshaus said the agency is proposing regulations that will require large-volume gasoline stations to carry a near-lead-free gasoline by mid-1974.

The regulations also will require a gradual reduction of lead in all regular and premium high-octane gasoline starting Jan. 1, 1974.

Free Press Threat

Times News Services

The province's withholding of advertising from Victoria's two daily papers "must be the most serious threat to the freedom of the press that this province has ever experienced," the president of the B.C. Weekly Newspapers Association said Wednesday.

Stan Stodola, who is also publisher of the Osoyoos Times in the Okanagan, said in a telegram to Premier Bennett the ad-ban decision was "an unprecedented form of economic reprisal which does not belong in a freedom loving country." The government announced last week it would no longer advertise in the two papers after they ran tobacco ads.

Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate said today the newspaper will not follow the example of the two Victoria newspapers in flouting the provincial government's ban on tobacco advertising.

"We are going to abide by the law which, incidentally, we think is crazy and ludicrous," he said.

"But the proper place to fight it is in the courts, where it is going forward now."

Keate added the Sun has "a lot of sympathy" for the Victoria Times and Colonist, following the provincial government's announcement last week that the papers will receive no more government advertising because they ran a cigarette ad.

"Our feeling is that in due course the law will be changed, if not by this government," he said.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, a lawyer told B.C. Supreme Court Justice E. E. Hinkson that the Social Credit government is trying to "dictate by prohibition" through legislation banning advertisements of liquor and tobacco in the province.

The lawyer, Doug Brown, was continuing an argument on behalf of four tobacco companies and three publishing firms in the second day of a test case challenging the validity of the Tobacco Advertis-

Ottawa Curbs Methadone, 'Speed' Use

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is clamping tighter controls on methadone, frequently used as a heroin substitute, and amphetamine drugs which are commonly called "speed."

Health Minister John Munro announced in the Commons today that new regulations will be enforced whereby the drugs can be prescribed only with his permission.

Following recommendations made by the LeDain commission on the non-medical use of drugs, Munro said physicians receiving permission to prescribe methadone must be associated with a specialized clinic.

The regulatory changes can be made in a few weeks, he said, and the program should be fully operational by June 1.

"In the meantime, I call on the physicians of Canada to utilize retraint in the use of methadone."

The minister said his department has received many reports concerning the misuse and abuse of methadone.

The LeDain commission, in suggesting that use of the drug be restricted to specialized treatment clinics, described the drug as "the most promising of all available approaches to the opiate narcotic dependence problem." Mr. Munro said several months ago there was a growing methadone-abuse problem among non-heroin addicts.

SEES OVER-PRESCRIBING

Mr. Munro said that while smaller amounts of amphetamine now are being prescribed, "considerable evidence has come to the attention of my department indicating the overprescribing of these drugs by some medical practitioners."

There also was evidence that the related drug phenmetrazine and phendimetrazine are misused in a similar manner.

As a result, he said, these drugs will be limited to the treeatment of legitimate medical disorders—in this case, the relatively obscure diseases of narcolepsy and hyperkinesis.

Doctors no longer will be allowed to prescribe them for the treatment of obesity in the form of "diet pills."

A list of consulting physicians will be drawn up to verify the two diseases.

Mr. Munro said restrictions on the use of amphetamines will not prevent "speed freaks" from getting drugs through illicit sources.

"Nevertheless, this action does indicate the serious light in which the government views amphetamine abuse and should have marked effects on an important aspect of abuse of these drugs—that by adults who obtain their drugs on prescription."

He expected this program to be operational by Sept. 1.

'DEAR JACK... RE THAT PROFIT'

"Dear Jack.

"Congratulations! I have just heard about the very healthy financial report you presented to your shareholders. I would remind you, however before you allocate these profits that by June 15 we expect to strike a bargain on the fair distribution of this bonanza among the workers in your company."

B.C.'s Most Wanted Criminal Arrested

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said today that Raymond Joseph Palmer, sought for questioning on the mailing of a bomb which blew off both hands of a British Columbia prison guard, has been arrested in Sydney, Australia.

Palmer, who escaped from the British Columbia Penitentiary in 1970, was arrested today in a dawn raid on a suburban Sydney home. Police sharpshooters surrounded the house and a squad armed with pistols and shotguns burst inside to find Palmer cooking breakfast for a young woman and two children living there.

He threw up his hands and backed against the kitchen wall. Police seized a large quantity of ammunition and two revolvers. Palmer was held on charges of being an illegal immigrant and is being questioned about three hold-ups there.

A Vancouver RCMP officer is expected to arrive in Australia soon to apply for an extradition order.

Proceedings were under way to have Palmer charged as an habitual criminal when he escaped from the penitentiary in 1970 while serving a six-year sentence for narcotics possession.

RCMP also want to question him about the slaying of a police informant as well as the bomb incident on Christmas Eve, 1966.

Guard Frank Newton had returned from work to find several Christmas packages waiting at his home in North Surrey. He took them into the kitchen and began opening them as his son, Norman, then 10, watched.

The bomb was concealed in

GIRL FOUND UNCONSCIOUS ON MALAHAT

A teen-aged girl was found unconscious and seriously injured in a ditch beside the Shawnigan Lake cutoff a mile from the Malahat late Wednesday night.

RCMP said the girl, estimated to be about 14, is in critical condition at Cowichan District Hospital. She was found at 11.15 p.m.

The girl carried no identification and police have been unable to determine her identity. Shawnigan Lake detachment is investigating possible assault or hit-run.

Passports Don't All Come Easy

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. William Dennison, wife of Toronto's mayor, said Wednesday she "just sat down and wept" when she was refused a new passport last week until she could provide proof of Canadian citizenship.

She said in an interview her mother had brought her from England "as a babe in arms" in 1910 and she had lived in Canada ever since. Four previous passport applications had been granted "with no trouble at all."

She had to produce a wedding certificate — the Dennisons have been married 33 years—and birth certificate. They were sent to Ottawa and then a new citizenship certificate had to be notarized by the city clerk.

Peking Talks Explore Links

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai held a three-hour secret summit session today, exploring ways of opening future channels of friendship between the United States and China.

They then spent two more hours together at a friendly, informal dinner.

Over-all, the two leaders were in each other's company for five hours without interruption but strict secrecy continued to prevail on their discussions.

Their lengthy meeting came a few hours after Nixon declared at the centuries-old Great Wall of China that he hopes his China visit would help break down walls of any kind — diplomatic as well as physical — that "divide the peoples of the world."

Nixon and Chou began their latest talk at 5:15 p.m. Peking time and were closeted together until 8:15 p.m. They then joined their wives, advisers and other guests for the two-hour dinner in another room of the mammoth Great Hall of the Peoples in central Peking.

Since Nixon's arrival in China four days ago, the two world leaders have been together approximately 25 hours, more than half of that time devoted to official discussions.

Newsmen were given no inkling of information on the progress of the latest Nixon-Chou get-together, but an air of cordiality seemed to be still prevailing.

It was definitely learned that the thorny issue of Taiwan, where the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek holds forth, was a principal topic of discussion by Nixon and Chou.

Meanwhile, in London, an unofficial Soviet publication launched a sharp personal attack on Nixon and voiced strong official suspicion of the Sino-American talks in one of the first broad comments on what it termed The Peking Opera.

NEW ARCTIC OIL FIND

CALGARY (CP) — Panarctic Oils Ltd. announced today the discovery of crude oil on Ellesmere Island in the Arctic. The discovery is the first in the northern islands. The company said further drilling and testing is needed to determine its commercial potential.

President Charles Hetherington said if the find proves substantial, its location in the eastern part of the islands means production could be shipped to eastern markets many months of the year.

Loffmark's Conflict

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is quitting the legislature's education committee because of a possible conflict of interest. A notice of motion on today's order paper says Loffmark will be discharged from further attendance on the education committee and shifted to the public accounts and printing committee for balance of the session.

Technicians Back

CBC technicians were back at work at most centres across Canada today as mediators conferred with union and management representatives in Montreal in an effort to resolve issues that have led to rotating strikes against the corporation for more than a month.

City Man Knifed, Dead; Suspect Goes to Police

By DOUG MacRAE

A 21-year-old man was stabbed to death in front of a hotel doorway early today while police officers were in the hotel parking lot investigating another matter.

Russell Streeter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin G. Streeter, 520 Ridley, Colwood, was pronounced dead at Queen Victoria General Hospital at 2.10 a.m., less than half an hour after the stabbing.

Police are questioning a 20-year-old man who turned himself in at city headquarters this morning.

Constables Frederick Wilfred Mills and Arthur Robert Blackie were in the parking lot on the south side of the Colony Motor Inn at Douglas and Hillside at 1:38 a.m.

The officers were interviewing witnesses in their cruiser after an unidentified man threw a beer bottle through the windshield of a patron's car.

At 1:45 a.m., Streeter stumbled to the side of the police car and collapsed to the pavement, with two stab wounds in the stomach and one in the chest.

The victim was rushed to hospital, where he was pronounced dead shortly after arrival.

There were 30 to 40 persons in the parking lot when the stabbing occurred. Blood stains indicate the slaying took place about 10 feet from an outside door which leads to the hotel beer parlor and coffee shop.

At 9:30 a.m., police said, the suspect walked up to the information desk at Fisgard Street police headquarters. The suspect said nothing, but a man with him introduced the suspect and told the desk officer, "I think you're looking for this man."

The suspect and a number of witnesses were being questioned this afternoon by detectives. A charge was expected to be laid later today.

The police cruiser was parked about 50 feet from the apparent scene of the slaying.

A hotel spokesman said there had been no fights or other incidents in the beer parlor before closing time at 1:30 a.m.

Police said, however, there were reports of an argument involving Streeter, the suspect and another man outside the hotel.

SHE WANTS WINGS

BELGRADE (UPI) — A 22-year-old Yugoslav air hostess who survived a 31,000-foot fall from an exploding aircraft nearly one month ago now reads, smokes, drinks coffee and wants to fly again, a Belgrade newspaper said today.

Vesna Vulovic, the sole survivor of the Yugoslav Airlines plane that crashed over Czechoslovakia Jan. 26 killing 22 passengers and five crew members, is recovering in a Prague hospital from brain, spine, kidney, liver, leg and other injuries.

'Safety Violated'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for striking marine radio inspectors said Wednesday his union believes vessels on the West Coast are violating federal radio safety inspection laws.

Dave McLeod, a spokesman for the electronics division of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, estimated that the radio safety certificates of at least a dozen ships have expired since the union went on strike Feb. 6.

Ed Peck, president of the Towboat Industrial Relations Association, said Wednesday he had no knowledge of any towboats operating with invalid certificates.

Meanwhile poor weather in Eastern Canada and a strike of the 2,200 airport technicians combined today to disrupt commercial air travel across the country.

All scheduled morning flights to the Maritimes out of Montreal were cancelled because of a storm expected to drop three to six inches of snow in the east.

'Go and Get Him Yelled General'

Times News Services

COLERAINE, Northern Ireland — Two newsmen said Wednesday that a British army general urged paratroopers to attack demonstrators during the "bloody Sunday" shooting in Londonderry which left 13 persons dead.

One newsman also said a soldier fired two shots at him.

THIRD DAY

Brian Cashinella of The Times of London and Simon Winchester of The Guardian testified Wednesday, the third day of the one-man inquiry into the Jan. 30 shootings being conducted by Lord Widgery, Britain's lord chief of justice.

Cashinella said Maj. Gen. Robert Ford, army commander in Northern Ireland, yelled "Go on the paras — go and get him!"

Paratrooper squads leaped a barricade and began chasing civil rights marchers, he said.

Cashinella said he understood the command meant for the men to arrest the demonstrators.

IN BOGSIDE

He said he was walking with a crowd inside Londonderry's Roman Catholic Bogside district when "three or four army vehicles, coming fast, came down into the area and the crowd started running."

Winchester said soldiers ran behind the vehicles.

He said he heard six shots. "People were very frightened indeed, because the vehicles were coming very fast," he said. "There was chaos, confusion, hysteria and screaming."

HALL BURNED

Meanwhile masked raiders today burned the town hall in Strabane, near Londonderry, birthplace of John Dunlap, the man who printed the U.S. declaration of independence.

A gang of attackers, some carrying weapons and some masked, held town hall workers at gunpoint while they splashed the building with gasoline, then set it on fire with bombs. There were no casualties.

In Belfast, troops found an arms cache in the garden of a Roman Catholic convent and a soldier was hit by a guerrilla sniper. Army headquarters said he was badly wounded.

Jeers Greet Geoffroy Explanation

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The opposition shouted with laughter today when Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer told the Commons the only question in the minds of prison authorities in the Yves Geoffroy case was whether he should be given leave of 50 or 72 hours.

Goyer said they decided on 50 hours for the convicted wife murderer.

Geoffroy married Carmen Parent outside the prison walls Christmas Eve and then vanished on a forged passport.

Goyer's new statement in the Commons on the case led to a renewed demand by the Conservatives for a judicial inquiry and by the NDP for the tabling of all pertinent documents.

The Liberals did not join in the laughter and many looked embarrassed.

Goyer said 14 persons were involved in the decision to allow Geoffroy out of prison to be married after serving 14 months of a life sentence for strangling his wife and setting the body afire.

Goyer said the decision by these 14 was unanimous.

The "only" question, he added, was whether Geoffroy should be given 50 or 72 hours outside the prison to be married to the woman with whom he had lived for nine months while his wife was still alive.

David Lewis, NDP leader, said the three documents tabled so far by Goyer — on orders of Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux — show that everyone involved assumed the marriage would take place within the prison, St. Vincent de Paul.

Goyer said there are other documents in the case, such as the recorded decisions of prison authorities.

Lewis demanded that all the documents be made public and Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) renewed a demand for a full judicial inquiry.

Lewis said Geoffroy's request last June 28 to get married did not refer to any marriage outside the prison.

Goyer said Geoffroy's request to be married outside the prison was made to a penitentiary official, though the minister did not say whether the request was made in writing.

The minister said he might create a precedent if he ta-
